BRITAIN DEMANDS APPEAL TO HAGUE

Official Announcement—It Is Believed Instructions Are Now on Way to Washington.

WE MAY FLATLY REFUSE

Two-Thirds Vote of Senate Necessary for Reference to Arbitration.

DELAY IN REPLY LIKELY

President Taft Will, It Is Thought, Wait for Secretary Knox's Return from Japan in October.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 3.—It was officially announced last evening that the British Government would make a formal demand upon the United States Government for arbitration of the British claim that the Panama Canal Toll act, as passed recently by the United States Congress and signed by President Taft, violates the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty.

Nothing definite is known here beyond the brief official announcement that the formal demand for arbitration will be made, but it is believed that instructions are already en route to the British Embassy at Washington concerning the situation.

The British demand will be made under the Arbitration Convention of 1908. Great Britain's contention will be that the question at issue does not affect the vital interests, independence, or honor of the United States, and that therefore it is clearly within the scope of the 1908 convention, since the matter to be arbitrated is not an act of Congress, but an interpretation of Article III. of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty.

The Daily News in an editorial article this morning argues that the British demand for arbitration is made in the spirit of cordiality which has existed between the United States and great Britain for many years, and which last year brought about an attempt to establish permanent machinery for arbitration, which attempt proved unsuccessful, owing to the adverse action of the American Senate. The Daily News continues:

"The demand will furnish an excellent test of the working of the system President Taft then hoped to create. It is not wholly to be regretted that the approaching celebration of a centenary of peace between the two nations should be preceded by an opportunity of showing how that peace has been maintained, and will be secured as an enduring monument to the good sense and enlightenment of the English-speaking race."

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 2.—The announcement that Great Britain will appeal to The Hague Tribunal to settle its claim of violation of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty by the Panama Canal act came as a surprise to President Taft. He had heard reports that such an appeal was contemplated, but was of the opinion that the matter would be taken up in the usual diplomatic way.

The President was not ready to-night to make an expression about the appeal to The Hague. He had no official word from the State Department, and he does not expect to consider the case until he reaches Washington on Wednesday. It was said that a decision might not be reached until the return of Secretary of State Knox, who is now on his way to Japan. Mr. Knox is due back in this country early in October. The President is known to place great reliance upon Mr. Knox's judgment, and is hardly likely to make such a decisive step without consulting him.

It was pointed out here to-night that Great Britain's notice of appeal did not mean that the matter must go to The Hague. The United States, it was stated, had as much right to refuse to submit to arbitration as Great Britain had to ask it.

Friends of the President realize that Great Britain's action places him in a delicate position. As the foremost advocate of universal arbitration, and arbitration of every subject, he is called upon to submit to The Hague a case that involves something in which every American feels himself vitally interested.

It was pointed out, however, that the President would have firm ground on which to base a refusal to arbitrate. His proposed arbitral court was to be composed of citizens of the two countries in dispute, and might therefore be expected to give a "square deal" to the parties at issue. The Hague Court, however, would not contain a number of Americans equal to the number of other members from other countries. All Europe feels much as Great Britain does about the Panama act, and a tribunal composed largely of Europeans could, it is asserted, hardly be just to America.

The President was aware when he approved the Panama act that further trouble with Great Britain would follow. He signed the bill reluctantly, but in the belief that, even if arbitration became necessary, the work of setting up the "machinery" to operate and administer the canal could go on. This part of the law was urgently needed, and he told friends that if arbitration were resorted to, and the United States were defeated, Congress would have plenty of time to remedy the situation that would then exist.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—That Great Britain would press for a reference of the Panama Canal dispute to The Hague was expected here, but officials of the State Department scarcely thought that the official declaration of this purpose would come so soon. The arbitration treaty of 1908 provides that differences of a legal character and affecting the interpretation of treaties which fail to yield to diplomatic settlement shall be arbitrated if the questions at issue do not affect the independence, vital interests, or honor of the contracting parties.

The first British protest was made when the Senate was disposed to exempt all American shipping from Panama tolls, but the Panama bill as enacted exempts only ships in the American coastwise trade. The protest was also directed against remission of tolls as an evasion of the spirit of the treaty. In the memorandum made public when he signed the bill, President Taft declared that the British protest was a proposal to read into the treaty a surrender of the right

NO POISON IN POTTER'S BODY

Family of Dead Sculptor Defend His Name and Deny Scandal.

SEATTLE, Sept. 2.—No traces of poison were found in the body of Louis Potter, the New York sculptor, who died last week while under treatment of a Chinese physician. The chemist who conducted the examination made this report to-day, and the body was turned over to a brother of the sculptor from Chatham, N. Y.

The police have learned that when Dr. Lee Hung Chow found his patient was ill from medicine, given in treating a skin disease, he gave another medicine, which he said would produced intense thirst, but cautioned Potter not to drink water.

Dr. James E. Collinge, a New York lecturer and friend of Mr. Potter, said last night that Martha Miller had been associated with Potter in New York in the study of occultism and that he had seen her here in the office of Dr. Ronald Strath, who, Coroner Snyder said, was caring for Potter's companion.

Miss Miller, Dr. Collinge said, was a writer of short stories.

Special to The New York Times.

CHATHAM, N. Y., Sept. 2.—This statement has been issued by the family of Louis Potter, the sculptor:

"The family of the late Louis Potter wish to correct the many mistatements regarding the events surrounding his death, which have appeared in the papers throughout the country. In doing so they will endeavor to state the plain facts, as follows:

"Mr. Potter was always interested in the investigation of the occult sciences and was for some time under the influence of such teachings, but of late had utterly abandoned them as harmful and of no value. During the past Winter he investigated the philosophy of Dr. Collinge, who held classes and gave lectures on the same in New York City. Mr. Potter's sole aim in all this study was to arrive at some higher spiritual insight, which might enable him to carry out his art conceptions and accomplish something which would benefit the world. His aims were always the highest.

"Unfortunately he had been afflicted from childhood with a skin disease, which had been a great source of annoyance. About the middle of July he went West to Vancouver, partly for a change and rest and partly to be with Mr. Collinge where he could pursue his studies and philosophy.

"The woman who is connected with the last sad event of Mr. Potter's life is the private secretary and booking agent for Dr. Collinge, whom Mr. Potter met for the first time in New York last Winter; he had not known her in Paris or elsewhere, as incorrectly stated in the papers. She and Dr. Collinge accompanied Mr. Potter from Vancouver to Seattle a day or two previous to the treatment by the Chinese doctor.

"Without a doubt the woman was to act as a friend and nurse during the treatment, and she remained with him to the end.

"Mr. Potter's various ventures in the occult had been something of a joke in his family, and it is undoubtedly this fact which led him to avoid publicity in registering under another name, as well as that of the woman in question.

"No relative or friend of Mr. Potter who knew him well and know his high aim and pure life, suspect him of any deviation from the standard which he had always set for himself. He was always charitable toward others, but strictly true to himself.

"If this age contained a Sir Galahad, it was Louis Potter, the sculptor. He lived for his art and he felt that only through the highest spiritual life could he gain the end he had in view."

EXPRESS TRAIN KILLS TWO.

Talbot and Annie Lynch Tried to Cross Tracks at Tarrytown.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Thomas Talbot of 11 West Eighty-first Street, New York, and Miss Annie Lynch of 12 Webster Avenue, Meriden, Conn., were instantly killed by a train near the Tarrytown station of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad to-night. Mary Lynch, a sister, and her escort, James Morrow, were knocked down by the shock of the passing train, but escaped injury. The bodies of the victims were ordered by the Coroner to be taken in charge by a local undertaker pending word from relatives.

The young women were visiting friends at 744 Columbus Avenue, New York, and came to Tarrytown to see James Morrow. Accompanied by their host and Talbot, they walked to the station to take the train this evening to return to New York. Arriving at the railway tracks, they attempted to cross the rails instead of using the overhead bridge. Talking and oblivious of the approach of an express train, which was due at Tarrytown at 10:15 o'clock, they had no warning of their danger. Morrow and Mary Lynch saw the headlight of the express almost upon them and jumped to safety. Talbot and Miss Annie Lynch were unable to get out of the way.

The engineer of the train apparently did not know of the accident, for the train rushed on without reducing speed. The bodies of the victims were thrown some distance and mutilated so badly as to be almost unrecognizable.

At the Bownette apartments, 11 West Eighty-first Street, it was learned last night that Thomas Talbot, the father of the youth who met his death yesterday, was the Superintendent. The family said the youth was a member of the Hudson River Boat Club and had gone to Tarrytown on an outing with his club mates. They denied all knowledge of any person named Miss Anna Lynch. At 774 Columbus Avenue, where Miss Lynch is reported to have made her home with a Mrs. Manning, it was stated that no person of either name was known.

SINK WITH BLAZING STEAMER.

Thousands See the Nantucket Turn Turtle in Flames—One Life Lost.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 2.—The steamer Nantucket of the Merchants and Miners' Line, which arrived from Boston this morning, lies to-night at the bottom of the harbor, just across the stream from the company's docks. Fire started in the vessel this afternoon and spread rapidly. An hour later the steamer turned turtle and went down in sight of thousands of excited spectators on the piers.

It was feared many lives had been lost, but it is now certain that only one man, James Rotton, perished. He had been ashore, but went back to get some money left in his stateroom.

About forty firemen and members of the crew who had been fighting the flames from the deck narrowly missed death as the steamer turned suddenly over and sank, amid a cloud of steam. They clung to the masts, stanchions, and parts of the rigging as the plunge was made. All were rescued by fire and police boats.

The steamer was comparatively new and valued at $450,000. She lies in the mud of Locust Point, with only a portion of her deckhouse and spars above the water line.

BLISS LEFT STORY OF ROOSEVELT FUND

Senators Hear That National Treasurer, Foreseeing Controversy, Wrote a Full Statement.

TRUSTEES SAID TO HAVE IT

His Son Will Be Asked to Testify—Senator Bourne Explains His Effort to Settle Trust Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Col. Roosevelt's letter to the Clapp Committee was read here to-day with the interest that usually attaches to the Colonel's controversial utterances. As testimony to the main facts in the Archbold-Penrose case it left in the general mind much to be cleared up, and it was the common verdict that the Clapp Committee would hardly regard the letter as a charter by which to conduct the investigation that will be begun the last of this month.

The statement attributed to Cornelius N. Bliss, which was printed in a newspaper last December and quoted in Col. Roosevelt's letter, is not regarded by men here who have inside information as being entirely conclusive on the subject of campaign contributions.

There has been a widespread belief that Cornelius N. Bliss, seeing clearly long before his death that his good name was sooner or later to be brought into question by a political controversy in regard to Col. Roosevelt's relations to "big business," made a careful statement of the facts as he knew them, which he wrote out in his own handwriting in order to establish its authenticity after his death, and left it in the hands of his trustees for use at such a time as might seem to them to justify its publication.

During the past week several Senators have hinted at the existence of such a document, but nothing authoritative has been forthcoming in regard to it.

Senator Clapp left Vermont last night. He will stop in New York on his way to Washington to inquire into this phase of the matter.

To Ask Younger Bliss To Testify.

While the list of witnesses for the committee is still only tentative, an opportunity will be given to Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., to appear and tell what he may know of his father's part in the events that are under review.

Senator Clapp purposes to invite before the committee all the men who have knowledge of the transactions of the National Committee in the different campaigns. Therefore it is not true, technically, that he had subpoenaed William Loeb, Jr., and George B. Cortelyou to testify. Both of these men and all the living treasurers of past National Committees will be asked to appear. W. R. Hearst and Mr. Archbold also will be formally invited to give evidence.

One feature of Col. Roosevelt's letter has provoked some criticism. This is the way in which he brought in the name of Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, and left with the reader the impression that Bourne was acting as a go-between for the Standard Oil management. Senator Bourne, when asked to-day for his version of the matter, made this statement:

"I must confess my surprise at Col. Roosevelt dragging my name into the controversy he is now having with Standard Oil representatives and others. I fail to see how my efforts to bring about a settlement between the Government and the Standard Oil Company in 1908 has any bearing upon the present political situation. However, since you newspaper representatives seem to think the subject of National importance, I give the following statement:

"Yes, I endeavored in 1908 to bring about a settlement between the Government and the Standard Oil Company, believing such a result would prevent the continuance of the panic, started in 1907, and that the Government could obtain much better terms by a settlement than through the courts, and President Roosevelt would have the co-operation of the big business interests of the country in his effort to obtain a Federal incorporation law that would bring all big business corporations directly under the strong arm of the Government—a law that would clearly define what the corporations could, must, and must not do. My idea of government is: First, protection of the personal liberty of the citizen; next, the protection of property rights.

"I have some imagination and initiative. I told President Roosevelt that I thought the time opportune to make a satisfactory settlement with the Standard Oil Company and obtain their co-operation, and that of other large business interests, in getting a Federal incorporation law that would provide a harbor of refuge for honest business, with the Government the harbormaster and the penitentiary for the dishonest business man. President Roosevelt expressed grave doubt of any settlement favorable to the Government being made with the Standard Oil Company.

Archbold Agreed to Co-operate.

"Entirely of my own volition and without Col. Roosevelt's knowledge, I went to New York, sought an interview with Mr. Archbold, and explained to him the advantages of a Federal incorporation law and the desirability of having large corporations responsible to one dominant power, the Federal Government, rather than to forty-six States, each with different laws, so that it was impossible to tell what a corporation, doing business in many States, could and could not do. I further dwelt on the necessity of the police force in society being superior to and dominating the commercial force; otherwise our Government would be short-lived, anarchy would follow, and the largest property holders would be the ones first destroyed.

"Mr. Archbold expressed himself as willing to compromise with the Government and favored a stringent Federal corporation law. Several conferences were held with the representative of the Department of Justice, and several times I thought a settlement would be effected. In my opinion, the Government would have been much better off had one been made rather than the final decision of the Supreme Court.

"In conclusion, I wish to state that I had no personal interest in the matter, other than a desire to minimize the panic and obtain the support of big business interests for a virile Federal incorporation law.

"I have never had any interests in any of the Standard Oil Companies. I have known Mr. Archbold and his family for several years and have visited his house. Neither he nor any of his associates have ever talked to me about any Congressional or State legislation other than my talk with him on a Federal incorporation law, and the popular government fundamentals. I have sought and obtained during the past few years conferences with many of our leading business men for the purpose of demonstrating how popular government, namely the initiative and referendum, recall, direct primaries and Corrupt Practices acts when generally adopted, were the best protection all honest business could have."

No Archbold Documents Yet.

There is no evidence here that supports Mr. Archbold's statement, when interviewed in England, that he turned over to the Clapp Committee all the documents

STORM'S DEATH TOLL 36 IN THREE STATES

LOSS WILL TOTAL MILLIONS

Pittsburgh Struck by Cloudburst and City Is Flooded—Sleeping Family Drowns in House.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 2.—No storm since those preceding the Johnstown flood ever wrought such damage to life and property in the district surrounding Pittsburgh as did the downpour which lasted until early this morning from early last night. The storm-swept area included Western Pennsylvania, with Eastern Ohio and a large part of the Panhandle district of West Virginia.

From fragmentary reports sent in from various points to-night it is known that at least thirty-six are dead and many more are missnig. The number may be increased, as many of the remote hamlets in the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia mountain districts will not be heard from for days.

Added to the list of fatalities late to-night are ten foreigners at Colliers, W. Va., bringing the list there up to eighteen; three at Burgettstown, Penn, bringing the list there up to four, and one at Woodlawn, Penn., near this city.

For nearly seven hours the rain fell in torrents. Cloudbursts filled fertile valleys with raging rivers, which annihilated crops and carried away bridges and railroad tracks. Lightning struck in scores of places. Quiet streams rose in an hour to become roaring agents of destruction. Railroad traffic practically stopped and wire traffic was paralyzed throughout most of the region.

Colliers, West Va., is practically wiped out. Cherry Valley, Penn., is in ruins. The towns of Avella, Cannonsburg, Washington, Burgettstown, and a dozen smaller places in the extreme western end of this State are inundated to-night. At New Philadelphia, Steubenville, and other Ohio towns near the Ohio River the damage wrought was heavy.

The Panhandle Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad ceased train operations today. Fourteen miles of track were washed away near Colliers. Three bridges were carried downstream. For miles along Raccoon Creek the roadbed is submerged. It will be a fortnight before traffic can be resumed here.

Ball Team Is Stalled.

The Pittsburgh baseball team, coming from Cincinnati last night, was stalled at Coshocton, Ohio, and tried to detour by way of Orrville, over the Fort Wayne Division, but it was impossible to get the team to Pittsburgh before nightfall, and the two games with the Chicago Cubs were called off.

Late this afternoon a freight train on the Wabash jumped the track five miles north of Wellsburg, West Va., and the entire train rolled into Cross Creek. A late report says the engineer swam ashore, but that the fireman and a brakeman are missing.

Washington County, Penn., also reports property damage that will exceed $2,000,000. Thousands of sheep and cattle were drowned in the fields. Washington is the greatest wool-growing community east of the Mississippi River. The streams throughout this county and in Greene County to-day were clogged with the bodies of sheep. Hundreds of the animals not yet sheared were soaked with rain, and, being too heavy for their own legs, were swept into the raging streams.

Pittsburgh was lashed by a fierce storm throughout the night. The play of lightning and the crash of thunder were continuous for hours. Street car traffic stopped shortly after 2 o'clock this morning because of broken wires and flooded streets. Five inches of rain fell during the night, a record in this district. Hundreds of belated trolley passengers spent the night in the car barns into which the trolleys were run for shelter.

Wire communication between Pittsburgh and the country to the southwest is only fragmentary. Telegraph companies have big corps of men working on the lines thrown down by the storm. Telephone communication is practically stopped. The Pennsylvania Railroad late this afternoon sent 1,000 men into the Panhandle district to rush the repair work between here and Wheeling, West Va.

The Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers are near the flood stage, and consequently the Ohio is overflowing its banks at many points west of Pittsburgh.

The known dead so far are Cook White, a farmer of Burgettstown, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. George Gillespie and four children of Cherry Valley, Penn.; Mrs. John Thorley, and an unidentified man, wife, and three children of Colliersville, West Va.; Amelia, John, and Grace Crow, brother and sisters, of Avella Penn., and Eli Hancock of Cannonsburg, Penn.

Sleepers Drown in House.

Cherry Valley, a mining town on the banks of a creek, was flooded within half an hour after the rain began to fall. Foundations of houses were undermined and they toppled over into the flooded streets. The Gillespie family was asleep and did not hear the shouts of warning. They were drowned in the house, and the bodies of the children were found on the little bed in their room, the mattress floating in four or five feet of water.

Cook White, who was a farmer in the outskirts of Burgettstown, heard the sound of the flood and hastened to his stable to save his horse. He was drowned, and a son who went to his rescue was swept away, but, catching the branches of an overhanging tree, drew himself to safety.

Chartiers Creek overflowed its banks at Cannonsburg and swept through the town, flooding the railroad and trolley tracks, and many of the streets. A number of houses were filled with water, but the residents had received ample warning and hastened to places of safety. Eli Hancock, who lost his life, had turned back to recover some valuable papers.

MRS. AUCHINCLOSS TO ASK A DIVORCE

Reluctantly Forced to It, She Says, Because of Her Broker Husband's Desertion.

BUT SHE STILL LOVES HIM

Left Her and Went to Europe Without a Word of Farewell, Ex-Social Leader Declares.

Mrs. Emma Guidet Duryee Auchincloss, who until her marriage nearly two years ago was one of the social leaders in Washington, D. C., announced yesterday that she would begin divorce proceedings to-day, elsewhere than in this State, against Samuel Sloan Auchincloss, a broker of this city. She will charge him with desertion, excessive drinking, and non-support. Mrs. Auchincloss has been living at the Buckingham Hotel, Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, with three children by her first husband, since the alleged desertion, and she has made repeated attempts, she said, to have her husband rejoin her. He has refused, giving simply as his reason that his feelings had changed. Because of this Mrs. Auchincloss decided yesterday to make public her contemplated action against her husband, so as to inform her friends, and for the sake of her children.

The announcement will come as a surprise to their many acquaintances here and in Washington, though it has been known for some time to the more intimate circle of their friends that they were living apart and that Mrs. Auchincloss contemplated taking the step which would end a condition of affairs which, she said, had become intolerable to her.

Mrs. Auchincloss's action follows an interview three days ago with her husband at Sea Bright, N. J., where Mr. Auchincloss is spending the Summer. She said that she felt that affairs could no longer be allowed to drift, and so she went to her husband and told him that unless he returned to her she would begin divorce proceedings. In order to avoid attracting attention, Mrs. Auchincloss went to Sea Bright and registered there as Mrs. Appleton. The interview was productive of no result, except that Mr. Auchincloss repeated that his feelings toward his wife had undergone a change.

When she told him that she would divorce him, he declared that she could not do so, and, she said, appeared to think that she would not take the step which would bring their affairs into publicity.

Mr. Auchincloss met the beautiful Mrs. Duryee first in September, 1910, at a luncheon at Delmonico's. Mrs. Duryee had come on for a few days from Washington, where her home, at 2,030 Hillyer Place, was the scene of many of the social events at the capital. She was well known in the diplomatic circle and had entertained there the President and nearly every representative of a foreign Government in Washington. Mr. Auchincloss followed Mrs. Duryee to Washington and pressed his suit with such ardor that when Mrs. Duryee returned to New York several weeks later she had consented to become his wife.

Closed Her Washington House.

They were married at Attleboro, Mass., on Nov. 3, 1910. Mr. Auchincloss went there two days before the wedding, and was joined there by Mrs. Duryee. Following her coming here, Mrs. Duryee had closed up her Washington house and sent many of her things here.

Two marriage ceremonies were performed, the first by a justice of the peace and the second by the Rev. J. Lee Mitchell of Attleboro. The double marriage was performed to insure Mr. Auchincloss and his wife against any possible legal complications, for Mrs. Auchincloss divorced her former husband, G. Abeel Duryee, in Newport, R. I., ten years before her second marriage, and the question arose as to whether a marriage by clergy could be contested.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss returned to this city and took up their residence at 133 East Fifty-fifth Street. At that time Mr. Auchincloss was a member of the firm of Joust, Taylor & Auchincloss, 60 Wall Street. A year ago, however, he left that firm. He now, with an uncle, has desk room in the office of Post & Flagg, 38 Wall Street.

Almost in tears, Mrs. Auchincloss, when interviewed by a Times reporter in her suite in the Buckingham, told something of the events which led up to taking the first step looking toward a divorce from her husband. The trouble she laid to his intemperate habits.

Mr. Auchincloss, his wife charges, left her on Feb. 9 and sailed for England. She said that he gave her not the slightest intimation that he contemplated leaving his departure. He left the house after bidding her good-bye as though to go to his office. When he did not return, she said, she called up his office and to her surprise was informed that Mr. Auchincloss had gone away and was not expected to return for several weeks. She learned that he had sailed for England. She questioned the butler and found that her husband had taken only his fur coat with him. What effects he took, she believes, were quietly removed and were in the taxicab in which he drove off.

Mrs. Auchincloss said that she wrote repeatedly to her husband while he was abroad, but he did not reply. A short time after his departure she closed the house, put the household things in storage and with her three children took up her residence at the Buckingham. Her trouble resulted in an attack of nervous exhaustion and for many days she was unable to leave her bed.

"I am very unwilling to take this step," Mrs. Auchincloss said. "I love my husband, and for him I gave up my home in Washington and left the social life there. It is because of my love for him that I suffer so much. My friends have begged me to take this step and now I am taking it. My position is such now that I cannot sleep at night and my health is breaking down. It must end, and so I have instructed my lawyers, Redfield & Lydon of 35 Nassau Street, to take the first steps to-morrow in a divorce action against my husband. Mr. Auchincloss has not contributed a cent to my support since he left home. I cannot account for the stand he has taken, and I believe that no one has come between us. He is at Sea Bright having a good time and I am here suffering."

Mrs. Auchincloss was Miss Emma Guidet, a daughter of the late George Guidet, who lived at 41 Park Avenue. He was wealthy, and a Belgian by birth. She first married G. Abeel Duryee. They had three children, Charles G. Duryee, who is now 21 years old; Miss Marie Duryee, whose introduction to society in Washington was one of the social events of a few seasons ago, and Agnes G. Duryee, a younger child.

In 1909 the Duryees were divorced. Mrs. Duryee went quietly to Newport and there established her residence. She brought a suit for divorce, alleging cruelty. She testified that her husband had threatened her many times and once had struck her with a cane.

Mrs. Duryee obtained a divorce and got the custody of the children. She returned to New York to live, but left soon afterward for Paris. She resided abroad for nearly eight years, spending her time either in France or Italy. Her children were educated abroad. Upon her return she went to Washington and took a house in Hillyer Place. Mr. Auchincloss was married before. His first wife died several years ago.

WILSON ODDS GO UP

And Lloyds Brokers Charge Less Than Last Week for Taft Policies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 3.—The Times says that numerous orders from the United States were again received yesterday by brokers at Lloyds in connection with the forthcoming Presidential election, and a good deal of business was placed.

To pay a total claim should Wilson be elected as much as 75 per cent. is quoted, compared with 60 per cent. quoted a week ago, so that on the basis of these rates Wilson's prospects are thought to have improved.

Twenty-five per cent. was yesterday accepted to cover the payment of claims should Taft be chosen, as compared with 30 per cent. a week ago.

The rate to cover the return of Roosevelt remained only 20 per cent.

The contracts provide that in the event of the death of a candidate the premiums are to be returned.

NOT TRUE, SAYS MACVEAGH.

He Never Heard Roosevelt Ask Morgan for $100,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Wayne MacVeagh, former Attorney General of the United States, this evening issued a denial of the story as related by Charles E. Russell in New York yesterday to the effect that he had been in the office of J. P. Morgan when President Roosevelt called over the telephone and asked for a campaign contribution of $100,000.

"Mr. Russell has been misled," said Mr. MacVeagh. "No such occurrence ever took place, nor anything even remotely resembling. I never heard Mr. Morgan allude to the subject of political contributions, nor, indeed, did I ever hear him use unbecoming language in discussing any subject whatever.

"I am very reluctant to be drawn, even to this slight extent, into the present distressing political turmoil, but what I have said is due to Mr. Morgan and to the truth. And I trust this further statement may also be permitted to me: I have always been bitterly opposed to the use of money in our politics, and have witnessed with abhorrence the corrupting and degrading influence of that evil system upon our public life—for, like other evil systems, it has grown by what it fed upon until to-day Government by money threatens the very existence of Government by the people."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.—Col. Roosevelt was questioned to-night concerning the statement by Charles E. Russell, Socialist candidate for Governor of New York, that Roosevelt had demanded, in a telephone conversation in 1904, that J. P. Morgan raise $100,000 for him.

"I don't know who Mr. Russell is, and never heard of him," said the Colonel, "but his statement is a particularly silly falsehood. I never had a telephone conversation, either directly or indirectly, with Mr. Morgan in my life, and I never asked him for any money."

THINK CABLE WAR IMMINENT.

London Observers Expect to See a Lively Competition Begin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 3.—In reply to inquiries made by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent yesterday at the Commercial Cable Company's office, it was stated that nothing was known of any intention on the part of that company to make any reduction in transatlantic tolls.

At the same time, however, the impression was gathered that the fact that it was Labor Day in America might possibly have a good deal to do with the absence of any response to the Western Union's latest move. In well-informed quarters in the city the belief exists that something not far removed from a cable war is imminent.

The divergences of policy on the part of the two great cable companies presage, according to the statement of an authority quoted by The Morning Post, further developments, which will take the form of healthy rivalry and legitimate business competition, as opposed to the methods of the old cable ring.

$10,000 TO SAVE CHILDREN.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 2.—Following the death of his daughter, Virginia, 7 years old, from infantile paralysis, Dr. Robert Edward Wilson of 4,295 Lindell Boulevard declared in his grief that he would give $10,000 to any physician who would save the lives of his other three children, who are ill of the same disease at his country home, The Oaks, Pattonville, Mo.

"I will give $10,000 to the man who can save my children," was Dr. Wilson's cry after his daughter's death. The pathetic scene in the little girl's room just before her death Saturday night caused Dr. Wilson to go frantic, while two other physicians who had been in attendance were so affected that they had to leave the room.

ATE THE WRONG KNUCKLES.

Seeking Treatment for Pigs' Knuckles, Atts Carried Pair Made of Brass.

Edward S. Atts, 29 years old, who gave his occupation as engineer and his address as 408 West Street, walked into Bellevue Hospital early last night for treatment. He said his stomach was troubling him and that he had been eating pigs' knuckles.

As one of the physicians leaned over him to attend to his ailment he brushed against something hard in his pockets, and an attendant in the hospital brought forth a pair of brass knuckles and a cylinder electric flash light. Then Atts was placed in the prison ward and detained on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

"I'm sorry I didn't eat the brass knuckles instead of the pigs'," he said.

TAFT GIVES $200 TO CHURCH.

Enriches Congregation in Millbury as Memorial to His Mother.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 2.—The Unitarian church in the little town of Millbury, the home of Miss Delia C. Torrey, aunt of President Taft, to-day received through its pastor, the Rev. W. T. Hutchins, a $200 contribution from the President as a memorial to his mother's interest in church work.

Mrs. Louisa Taft, the President's mother, and sister of Miss Torrey, lived in Millbury for a long time, during which period the present head of the Nation also attended the little brick church on the common.

President Taft's gift was made public to-day at a meeting of the congregation.

FIND RETREATS OF VICE TRUST

Hotel in Hoboken and Cottages in Sullivan County Harbor Witnesses City Wants.

PLOTTERS BEING WATCHED

Evidence Against Policemen and Resort Promoters Heavy and Growing.

TO ARRAIGN BECKER TO-DAY

He'll Plead to Indictment Before Goff—Fosdick's Evidence of Graft to be Used by Whitman.

Two refuges, conducted by the Vice Trust for its members and for persons whose presence in the city might prove embarrassing to them, have been discovered by the District Attorney's office. These places are maintained at considerable expense by the trust, solely that it may have hiding places to which witnesses wanted by the police or the District Attorney's office may be spirited.

The location of both places is known now to District Attorney Whitman. One is within this State. The other is just across the river, in Hoboken, N. J., and in more serious cases it is this one to which witnesses or principals in cases concerning the Vice Trust are hustled, since extradition proceedings are thus made necessary before the fugitives, even when found, can be forced into a New York court.

This place is a hotel, patronized liberally by persons who have no knowledge of the character of other guests, and it is this good reputation which increases the worth of the place as a refuge for persons who would escape the police.

The second place is in Centreville, in Sullivan County, and there the Vice Trust maintains four cottages which have the appearance to the innocent of simple boarding houses. Lodgers there never pay board, however. These cottages are conducted by employes of the Vice Trust. All the bills are paid from the headquarters of the trust here, and no one is admitted to any of the cottages without credentials from the trust.

Refugees Live Well.

The discovery of these places was made by members of Mr. Whitman's staff after an investigation resulting from the observation that witnesses in disorderly resort cases seemed frequently to disappear, even when there was good reason to believe that they had not the money to carry them even on a ferry ride across the river. The frequency with which persons apparently on the verge of poverty were able to leave town whenever the exigencies of a case concerning the Vice Trust seemed to demand their departure made Mr. Whitman's investigators morally certain that somewhere the trust must be maintaining a refuge for just such persons. Men were set to trail persons who the District Attorney had reason to believe might have been hustled out of the city.

These investigators, in their reports of the discovery of the two refuges, declared that inmates of the Centreville cottages lived lives almost of luxury. There were frequent automobile rides, and they were so plentifully supplied with money that they found it an easy matter to take part in the affairs of the Summer resort. It was clearly the purpose of the Vice Trust to keep its guests happy, so that they might not weary of their sojourn before it should be deemed safe for them to reappear in their old haunts.

The identity of many persons who have lodged at Centreville and in the Hoboken hotel has been discovered, and these discoveries have explained, in several instances, the absence of persons much wanted in various cases. Although there appears to be no way in which the District Attorney can close these refuges, it is kown that they are being watched now and will be watched, at least until the District Attorney's office abandons for all time the investigation into graft and corruption which practically is only about to begin with the John Doe inquiry which Supreme Court Justice Goff will institute to-day.

Hoboken Now Headquarters.

The sudden disappearance of the men involved in the attempt to discredit members of the District Attorney's staff by false affidavits is explained in the discovery of these refuges. It is believed now by the District Attorney that when they fled from town last Saturday they went immediately to the hotel in Hoboken, and there it is that the District Attorney expects the next steps in their plan of defense will be discussed and prepared.

The purpose of the Vice Trust members in striving to cause the District Attorney to abandon his crusade against organized vice is not because of any fear of prison sentences for themselves, nor is it because they fear the revelations of graft between organized vice and the police which Mr. Whitman's investigation has been disclosing. Theirs is a purely financial concern. The members of the Vice Trust have thousands of dollars invested in resorts, and in hotels which are little different from resorts, and they would guard against the loss of this money invested—of their hotel licenses and their liquor licenses.

But though the Vice Trust so far has been moved solely by financial motives, its members shortly will find themselves facing criminal prosecutions and jail sentences. For a thorough investigation of the Vice Trust has become a matter which will receive first consideration in the John Doe inquiry, and the Vice Trust by its $50,000 fund to corrupt or to defame the District Attorney's office has called the investigation on its own head.

When Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith conducted the midnight raids of last Aug. 15 against eighteen of the thirty-two houses operated by the Vice Trust, he did so under orders, not because Mr. Whitman wished to terminate the existence of such houses—that was incidental—Mr. Smith acted because he wanted to lay hands on persons who could expose the connection of the police with organized vice.

Raids Made for Evidence.

These persons were caught and the information was obtained. Their trials will be moved in Special Sessions on Sept. 15, and then, too, will be moved the trials of several hotels raided as resorts, among them Mochs Hochstim's Hotel Lincoln. Had the Vice Trust been content to take such punishment as might be meted out to it in these cases the John Doe inquiry probably would have concerned itself only slightly with them and mostly with the police situation as regards corruption.

But with the raising of the $50,000 fund and the effort by means of false affidavits to blacken the character of some of Mr. Whitman's assistants, the Vice Trust members laid themselves open to prosecution on the charge of conspiracy, a felony, as against the misdemeanor charge of conducting a resort.

From the instant that District Attorney Whitman learned of the conspiracy, (and that was when the meetings of the conspirators first began on last Aug. 16,) his men have been gathering evidence against them, until to-day the District Attorney possesses sufficient evidence to convict a Police Captain and a politician who no longer holds office, but who is a power in the underworld.

In addition to these men, Mr. Whitman is understood to have much evidence—and to be acquiring more daily—against two men attached to the staff of an Inspector and against another policeman attached to a second Inspector's staff. These four are the only members of the police force who have been connected so far with the conspiracy to corrupt or defame the District Attorney's office. In addition to them, however, are the six members of the Vice Trust, the two politicians, and four men who run hotels of low character. All told, some seventeen men are known to have been concerned in the conspiracy, and it is predicted now that not one of the seventeen will escape.

But for the tip which scattered the conspirators last Saturday, when they were to have completed the details of their plans, several of them would be under arrest now. Mr. Whitman's men, cognizant from the first of their meetings, had planned to take them with the false affidavits in their possession, and the capture was to have been made on last Saturday.

At present the conspirators, with the exception of the policemen, are out of town, but every one of them is under surveillance, and they can be brought back to the city whenever they are wanted. The failure to trap them with the false affidavits in their possession has decided Mr. Whitman, however, to take up an investigation of the affair at the John Doe inquiry, and it may be several weeks before their phase of the general inquiry is reached.

It was asserted yesterday, however, on behalf of the District Attorney, that when the time comes every conspirator will be arrested, and it was asserted with equal confidence that every one of them, including the policemen, would be convicted.

MISSING WITNESS IN ENGLAND.

Coupe Met at Fishguard Refuses to Talk—Goes to Liverpool.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

FISHGUARD, Sept. 2.—Thomas L. Coppard, or Coupe, the Rosenthal witness, declined to give any information on his arrival on the Lusitania to-day. He proceeded to Liverpool. Two Fishguard police officers made a futile attempt to persuade him to return.

BECKER TO PLEAD TO-DAY.

Trial Date to be Set and Justice Goff's Inquiry Begun.

Lieut. Charles Becker, indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, will begin his fight for life this morning when he is led from his cell in the Tombs, across the Bridge of Sighs, to face Justice John W. Goff, presiding over the Extraordinary Term of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court which he will convene by order of Gov. Dix.

Becker will be asked to plead to the blanket indictment, which charges him together with his former client and friend, Jacob Reich, William Shapiro, the gunmen's chauffeur, and the four gunmen, with murder in the first degree. Whether he does so or not, District Attorney Whitman will move for his immediate trial, and Justice Goff is expected to fix next Tuesday, Sept. 10, as the day for it to begin.

There has been some speculation as to what the procedure may be to-day, for in addition to setting a date for Becker's trial Justice Goff has also to inaugurate the John Doe inquiry, which bids fair to share with Becker's trial in important disclosures. Becker's case, besides, is now on the calendar of General Sessions, and in the natural course of events he would be arraigned before Judge Mulqueen this morning to make his plea.

Whether he is arraigned there first and then led into the Supreme Court, or whether he makes his first appearance before Justice Goff, depends upon the expedition of District Attorney Whitman in having his case transferred from General Sessions to the Supreme Court. That will be Mr. Whitman's first duty to-day, and should the transfer be effected before Becker is brought from the Tombs, he will go directly before Justice Goff.

In any event, the delays required by law will prevent his trial from being set before Sept. 10, and that is the day which Justice Goff is expected to select. Whether John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Becker, will fight for delay is not known, but it is believed that he will content himself with the usual motions for the dismissal of the indictment, permission to remove the minutes of the Grand Jury, and then, perhaps, make a request for a change of venue.

A man close to the lawyer declared that this would be his procedure and that were the request denied, as he expected it would be, he would make no other effort to delay the trial, but would take his place at the counsel table on the day Justice Goff might fix, there to direct his client's course in the selection of a jury. Mr. McIntyre's spokesman explained that in doing this the lawyer was governed by a conviction that a jury never could be obtained in this county and that Justice Goff, as Justice Daniels was in the case of the "Boodle Aldermen," would be compelled, against his wishes, to move the trial into another county.

With the Becker case disposed of, however, Justice Goff will still have to start the John Doe inquiry. This will be done by the presentation to the court of an affidavit by Assistant District Attorney William A. De Ford, based on information and belief, that conditions in this city, especially in so far as the Police Department is concerned, demand a rigid investigation.

Justice Goff has seen this document already and doubtless is familiar with its contents. It covers eighty printed pages and goes extensively into the details of graft charges which Mr. Whitman's investigation has brought out already. The relation of the police to gambling and organized vice is covered in many pages and not a point brought out by Mr. Whitman's inquiry has been neglected.

Extensive Graft Charges.

Detailed as is this information, however, it will be supplemented with a report rendered by Raymond B. Fosdick when he was Commissioner of Accounts, of conditions in the Police Department the early part of this year. Mr. Whitman is believed to have asked for this report and inasmuch as Mr. Fosdick voluntarily offered his records and his personal assistance to the District Attorney, there is little doubt that Mr. Whitman will receive the report.

It covers an investigation undertaken by Mr. Fosdick on a complaint by Capt. Patrick L. Walsh, when he was transferred from the West Forty-seventh Street station. He had been promoted for his good work, and was continuing to clean up his precinct when he received a visit from a man higher up whom he recognized as a companion of officials known throughout the department to be grafters. This man laid down the law to Walsh and retired with a demand for half the graft Walsh collected.

The new captain, angered at the insinuation, refused to have anything to do with this man, and presently he found himself transferred to a Staten Island precinct. Then he went to First Deputy Police Commissioner McKay with his complaint. Mr. Fosdick took up the investigation, but was called off before he had completed it, because Mayor Gaynor believed then that Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo had a firm grip on his department, and that outside investigations might defeat the Mayor's purpose of reducing to a minimum opportunities for graft.

So far as it went, however, Mr. Fosdick's investigation was complete and is said to contain the names of Captains, at least one inspector, and to make pointed reference to various sins of omission and commission which formed a trail leading directly into Police Headquarters.

Supplemented by this report the information will provide the basis for an investigation more far reaching than any which this city has experienced even in the Lexow and Mazet inquiries. There are no names mentioned in Mr. De Ford's affidavit, but it is known that a list of upward of one hundred names has been prepared by the District Attorney as a guide to Justice Goff in issuing his subpoenas from which no one, no matter what his official position in the city, is exempt.

This list of names is understood to include those of Mayor Gaynor and Police Commissioner Waldo, as well as the names of scores of policemen, gamblers, and denizens of the underworld, every one of whom is believed by the District Attorney to be able to throw some light on conditions in the Police Department or on its relations with gambling and vice.

This list will be presented to Justice Goff in conjunction with the information in order that subpoenas may be got out immediately for such witnesses as the Justice wishes to hear. There is no chance, however, that they can be called before him short of a week or more, for under the law there must be a lapse of some days before the Extraordinary Grand Jury can be convened.

A panel of fifty men has been drawn already, and from this panel the jury of twenty-three men must be selected. This will be undertaken a week from to-morrow, and it promises to differ from the usual method of obtaining a Grand Jury, since District Attorney Whitman will examine each talesman on the stand exactly as though he were getting a trial jury.

The District Attorney has been investigating the personnel of the panel, and it is known that in one or two instances he has made discoveries which make it certain that he will protest against the acceptance of these men as Grand Jurors.

The District Attorney has paid special attention to the financial and business interests of the talesmen, and he will be guided by information already acquired in the examination of each man on the witness stand. Good time will have been made, therefore, if the Extraordinary Grand Jury shall have been selected by Wednesday of next week.

CAUGHT WITH LOOT FROM COLER HOME

PLUNDER STORED IN BAGS

Passing Bluecoat Sees Youths Trying to Sell It in Shop—Colers Back from Auto Trip.

A heap of silverware, knives and forks and spoons on the counter of a curiosity shop in Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, and the sight of two boys bending over it as if haggling with the proprietor for his best price, aroused the flickering suspicion in the mind of Patrolman Solan, who, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, was passing by on his way to the Adams Street Station. Solan stepped inside and peered at the silver. It was all marked with a "C."

The boys looked at him nervously, and in answer to his questions explained that an old man had given the ware to them with instructions to dispose of it for him. Solan cast a few glances about him, wondering what the youths had carried the silver in, when he spied a black leather traveling bag on the floor in the shadow of the counter. He lifted this to the light, examined the tag, and on the inserted calling card read the name "Bird S. Coler." Now, that is still a name to conjure with in Brooklyn, and Solan placed his heavy hands on the shoulders of the youths. As he did so he noticed a suitcase on the floor and stopped long enough to inspect its contents of bracelets, lockets, field glasses, rosaries, umbrellas, and watch and chain before he gathered that in as part of the plunder and carried bags, silver, and captives to the Adams Street Station.

It was then about 7 o'clock. A few moments earlier an automobile drew up at the entrance to the grounds of the handsome house at New York Avenue and Prospect Place, which is the home of ex-Controller and ex-Borough President Coler. The car was bringing Mr. and Mrs. Coler home from a week-end trip to Croton Falls. And the first sight that greeted them was that of a light burning in the upper floor of a house that should have been dark. The second sight was a broken window pane, shielded from the view of the street by the canvas that screened the porch. Inside the path of the burglar could be seen everywhere in overturned drawers, rifled tables and capsized furniture. Mr. Coler jumped to the telephone, and even as he jumped a man from the Atlantic Avenue Station ran up the path to assure him that the police knew all about the burglary, had his missing valuables, and thought they had the burglars. All of which only went to strengthen Coler's confidence in the police of Brooklyn. Once before a thief had made off with a valuable fur coat of his, and when Mr. Coler, who was then Borough President, discovered his loss two hours later a policeman showed up with the recaptured coat on his arm. They had done much the same thing for a friend of his whose coat was stolen in court one day.

At the Adams Street Police Station, Mr. Coler identified his property, and the arrested youths gave their names as James Smith of 5,016 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, and Walter McCabe of 468 Sixtieth Street, Brooklyn. Each gave 17 years as his age. In Smith's pocket the police found a list of names and addresses pointing to good neighborhoods and believed by the detectives to have been memoranda for future excursions in burglary.

Mr. Coler said that the silver had been found in a bundle on the second floor of his house, and that it was not his best table plate. This, he said, had been consigned to a safety deposit vault when the family left town in early June and had not yet been taken out.

He was seen to enter the front door as the house collapsed.

An unidentified boy fell into the flood when the porch of a house where he had taken refuge went down, and although scores of persons attempted to save him he was swept away. A number of children in the community are also among the missing.

Many houses in Cannonsburg, undermined by water, collapsed to-night. A spectacular feature was the wrecking of a large store. The water seemed to push the foundations together like a jackknife and the building dropped with a thud. At East Cannonsburg the flood water caught families suddenly and it was necessary to remove them to safety by aid of small boats.

Prompt action on the part of the Pittsburgh-Buffalo Coal Company brought the lives of 400 miners out of the flood's path. When the water was seen to be gaining headway, whistles were blown calling the surface men to the office. Quickly they notified the men beneath the earth. Men on horseback rode down a narrow valley and warned the families of the miners. To-night all seemed to be accounted for, but there is some doubt as to this.

At Avella, Washington County, three children of Henry Crow were drowned. The house was situated near a little stream which rose so rapidly that it undermined the building, and when it collapsed Mrs. Crow was badly injured. Crow hastened to her rescue and saved her, but before he could return for the children they were swept away.

GOV. HARMON SENDS AID.

Hundreds Homeless from Storm in Vicinity of Salineville, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 2.—Adjt. Gen. Weybrecht of the State Militia, with twenty men from the State Medical Department, left here this afternoon on a special train for Salineville, carrying relief to the sufferers from the cloudburst last night.

Gov. Harmon received a message to-day from Mayor J. Hunt Beard of Salineville saying that hundreds were homeless and asking for relief. The train carried several hundred cots, bedding, and a quantity of medical supplies. Gov. Harmon also notified the Cleveland branch of the Red Cross Society, asking them to send help to Salineville.

MICHIGAN CROPS DESTROYED.

Loss from Rain Will Reach Several Hundred Thousand Dollars.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., Sept. 2.—One of the worst electrical storms in years raged in this district early to-day and last night, and the loss is expected to total several hundred thousand dollars. No deaths have been reported.

Telephone and telegraph companies lost heavily, and it is believed that a large share of the damage must be sustained by farmers, whose crops in many instances were destroyed. The west side of Traverse City is under water, the depths varying from one to eight feet.

CLOUDBURST IN WISCONSIN.

Three Reported Dead in Train Wreck Due to Washout.

LACROSSE, Wis., Sept. 2.—A train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway, running between Minneapolis and Chicago, was reported to have run into a washout at Little Lemonweir Creek, one mile north of Hustler, Wis., to-day. A telephone message from Hustler, which is between Camp Douglas and Elroy, said that three persons, including the engineer, were dead. The washout followed one of the heaviest cloudbursts experienced in this section of Wisconsin this year.

Reports of serious damage from yesterday's flood throughout Northern Wisconsin, caused by cloudbursts, were received to-day.

Stevens Point reported that 600 feet of track on the "Soo Line," one mile from Ladysmith, had been washed out, and the "Velvet Special" thrown off the track. The track between Medford and Chelsea was mostly under water, and trains were tied up a number of hours. More than three inches of rain fell at Medford.

The Wisconsin River at Wausau is within two feet of the July flood stage, the greatest in the city's history, and no trains were running to-day on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway north of Wausau. A railroad bridge was dynamited last night to relieve pressure on the coffer-dam in the East Channel at Waussau.

CHICAGO GETS A DRENCHING.

Downpour Breaks Hot Wave—Lightning Starts Many Fires.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Rain descended in torrents this afternoon and broke the hot spell. Thousands of patrons were turned away from the American League ball park and sought shelter in street cars and doorways when the clouds opened. The temperature dropped ten degrees in less than an hour, and stood in the seventies.

The fire alarm office in the City Hall was repeatedly notified that houses had been struck by lightning. Two alarms were sounded in the downtown district, one at State and Adams Streets, in the retail section, and the other from Market and Madison Streets, in the wholesale quarter.

An inch and a half of rain fell between 3:30 and 4:30 o'clock. Water from a broken sewer flooded the café of a Michigan Avenue Hotel. It is estimated that $100,000 damage was caused by the fires and water.

Miss Cecelia Halford was playing a piano when the instrument was struck by lightning. Miss Halford was dazed, and was burned on her right foot. The piano was destroyed and the house was set on fire.

The United States life saving crew rescued Frank A. Morgan, after he had been blown into the lake by the high wind which swept over a pier where he was fishing.

Excitement was caused among sixteen chorus girls when the room underneath the stage of a Clark Street theatre, in which they were making a change of costume, began to fill with water. The girls mounted chairs, tables, and boxes and called for help. The water in the dressing room was thirteen inches deep before they were carried out by stage hands.

CROWDS BRAVE RAIN TO HEAR ROOSEVELT

Colonel Whirls Through Connecticut Into Massachusetts and Then Starts on Tour West.

HE STOPS AT NEW HAVEN

Which Had Been Called a Danger Spot—Ridicules Wilson, and Elaborates Tariff Views.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE ROOSEVELT TRAIN, Sept. 2.—In a tour of Connecticut which more genuinely deserved the name of "whirlwind" than such tours usually do, Col. Roosevelt to-day elaborated his views on the tariff and ridiculed those who would make it the issue of this campaign as seeking to "draw a red herring across the trail" of the real issues.

He made fun of Gov. Wilson for having a platform that he could not stand on, though he conceded that perhaps the Governor had "one leg on it." He declared for the adoption by the Nation of the Kansas "blue-sky law," and for having the Federal Government assume control over the issuance of securities by concerns engaged in inter-State commerce.

He proposed that schoolhouses be turned into "a senate of the people," where they could discuss the issues of the hour. His slogan on this question was, "Public buildings for public uses." He declared that the Government would have to exercise control over the insurance business. But through all and over all he unceasingly projected the idea which he has come more and more to make his central demand—the increase of the people's participation in their own government.

Accustomed as the Colonel is to having admiring crowds, there were some things about the thousands who heard him to-day in Stamford, Bridgeport, New Haven, Meriden, and Hartford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass., which surprised even him. He had been told that Connecticut was lukewarm to him and had been warned that there were danger spots in the Nutmeg State. He was especially cautioned against New Haven, which was supposed to be a "dead town" so far as Roosevelt was concerned. So New Haven was left off his itinerary, but at the last moment it was decided to make a stop there, and it was there that he evoked the greatest enthusiasm of the day. He could speak only at the railroad station, but thousands crowded around to hear him, to listen with that intent silence which marks his hearers in this campaign, to shake his hand if possible, and to run after his car as it pulled out, shouting out cheers and blessings.

Big Crowd Stands in Mud.

It rained dismally and was cold all day, but nothing could keep the Progressives of Connecticut at home. At Hartford he spoke under exceptional disadvantages. The fair grounds are far on the outskirts of the town; people had to tramp through mud to get there and stand in mud, with rain pouring on them, but 15,000 put up with all these discomforts. Standing on the grand stand steps were men and women on whom descended from the roof a pouring stream that soaked them to the skin. If there were "curiosity seekers" among them they underwent a good deal to satisfy their curiosity.

The attitude of all these thousands in the different cities was the same. After the first cheer they applauded very little. They listened with strained attention and intense earnestness, apparently anxious to catch the full meaning of every part of his programme. At the end there was always the same mad enthusiasm. The presence of a few dissenters was manifested by some of the questions asked, but as a rule the questioners seemed to be asking for information.

"They say that they are afraid of me," said the Colonel in Meriden. "It isn't me they're afraid of; it's you," and again he spoke of the antagonism as not against himself, but against the fact that he happened "for the time being" to be the embodiment of the demand that the people should rule.

These sayings and others like them got cheers, but they were not great cheers. They were entering ways at the end. The impression one gained was that his audiences were too intent on his words to wish to interrupt him. Even on the outskirts of the open-air crowds, where only a sentence or two here and there could be heard, there was none of the usual gossiping and laughing among those who could not hear. They listened hard in the hope of catching at least a phrase or two.

The Colonel's stop at Stamford had not been advertised, and there were only about 300 people there when he got out to climb into an automobile and speak. The 300 grew in a minute to 500, then to 1,000, and when he finished his brief talk and rushed back to his train 1,500 wildly excited enthusiasts ran after him to yell "Teddy forever!"

At Bridgeport he spoke to 5,000. At Springfield there were fully 8,000. The attitude and temper of every audience was the same.

"And yet they told me New Haven was a dead town," said the Colonel with a satisfied smile, as he entered his car after the great demonstration there.

Colonel Makes Early Start.

Col. Roosevelt arose at 4:30 o'clock this morning to motor into New York from Oyster Bay to catch the 8:03 train from the Grand Central Station.

At Bridgeport, the first regularly scheduled stopping place on the tour, the Colonel spoke at Seaside Park. It was here that he took the opportunity to define his attitude toward Socialism and to make his first reply to the criticisms of Gov. Wilson.

"I don't know whether Mr. Wilson is standing on his platform," he said. "I suppose there are intervals at which one leg is on it. Last week I noticed that Mr. Wilson argued against a position I took. He first stated it incorrectly. I don't mean that he intentionally stated it incorrectly, but evidently his source of information was poisoned."

The Democratic candidate, he said, had asserted that Roosevelt, in favoring "a more equal distribution of the prize money," had defended "legitimate booty" in the way of tariff privileges. The Colonel declared that he had not been speaking of the tariffs. He meant that he believed large prizes in industry were legitimate in return for honest effort, but that the workmen should have their share.

Then Col. Roosevelt read a letter which was handed to him, asking his position in regard to Socialism.

"I think that a will o' the wisp is too light a term to apply to Brother Debs," he said in reply. "I think that no workingman will get what he seeks from the Socialists, and that he will be harmed rather than helped by such an association.

"Mr. Debs wishes to pull down in a spirit of hatred; I wish to build up in a spirit of brotherly love. Some of the Socialists want to go so far that they can't see where they're going, and I can't either. If you try to take all the steps toward reform at once you'll find it quite a straddle. You'll probably split yourself and not get anywhere."

Asks for a Square Deal.

At Meriden, the next stop after New Haven, the crowd called for a speech, and Col. Roosevelt said:

"My friends, give us as much of a show as possible; give us a square deal. I speak in behalf of our cause, for, my friends, it is your cause; it is to give you the opportunity to rule yourselves and run your Government as you want to run it, with justice, social justice, to every man and woman within the borders of your country, whether farmer, wage worker, or professional man. Friends, our motto is not some men down and some up."

A hard rain was falling when Col. Roosevelt reached Charter Oak Park, outside of Hartford. A good size crowd was huddled together under the shelter of the grandstand. When Col. Roosevelt was explaining his views on "The right of the people to rule," a man in the crowd called out: "Why did not you advocate that seven years ago?"

"The answer to that," said the Colonel, "is that I did advocate it seven years ago. I am glad that we have got you along in your slow procession to where you know we advocate it now. You'll be with us before you know it."

Col. Roosevelt advocated the adoption in the Nation of a law similar to the Kansas "blue sky" law, which regulates the issuance of securities.

"We should see to it," he said, "that the issuance of securities is regulated in such a way that we know that the value is back of the securities.

"Now just one word about the protective tariff, about which Mr. Wilson spoke in connection with me. I want to reiterate that my statement was about the prizes of industry and a more equitable division of the prize money. It had no reference to the tariff, but as Mr. Wilson has applied it to the tariff, I will apply it also. The tariff has no justification except as it helps our people as a whole.

"It is a poor business for any party if it makes a paltform upon which its candidate cannot stand. The Democratic platform says that the tariff is unconstitutional. Of course, if it is, it has got to be abolished at once. But I cannot imagine anything that would bring more disaster to this country than the abolition of the tariff.

Favors Tariff Commission.

"I wish to see various duties revised downward, but what I especially am anxious to see is the creation of a Government tariff commission similar to that in Germany.

"This talk of the tariff is simply a red herring across the trail to distract the attention of the people from the real needs of the situation. The prosperity of Germany under protection and the industrial retrogression of England under free trade shows that it proves the utter nonsense of supposing that the adoption of free trade by this country—which, as a matter of fact, would be utterly ruinous—could under any circumstances aid in the solution of our great economic problems."

Col. Roosevelt referred to his controversy two years ago with Gov. Baldwin regarding the decision by Mr. Baldwin, then Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court, that a workman's compensation act was unconstitutional.

"Here in Connecticut," he said, "in view of my controversy with his Excellency, the Governor, a couple of years ago, I want to point out a fact of our position. We intend to have a workmen's compensation act everywhere in this Union. We intend that our public servants shall give it to us.

"We intend that our legislative and executive servants shall give it to us, and we intend that the courts shall not block the way to our having it. If the courts anywhere declare that the Constitution of the State prevents, then the people of the State who made the Constitution are to have the right to say whether or not they mean that the Constitution shall prevent their doing justice."

In Springfield the Colonel found one of the largest crowds which he has seen recently. It filled the space about the railroad station, which is an elevated structure, and overflowed into the street below. The Colonel mounted a truck and spoke for half an hour, starting West directly after he closed. He is due in St. Louis at 3 P. M. to-morrow, and after speaking there will leave for St. Paul.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR COLONEL.

Central Refuses to Alter Schedule for Platform Speech in Illinois.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Refusal of the officials of the New York Central lines to permit the "Southwestern Limited," on which Theodore Roosevelt is traveling to St. Louis, to be delayed to-morrow while crossing Southern Illinois in order that the Colonel may make a series of carttail speeches at way stations, caused Chauncey Dewey of this city to charter a special train to-night for the Colonel to use after he reaches Terre Haute, Ind., on the regular train.

The train will be waiting at Terre Haute when Col. Roosevelt reaches there to-morrow morning. Stops will be made by the special at many points in this State to enable Mr. Roosevelt to speak, including Mattoon, Hillsboro, Pana and Belleville.

GATHER FOR CONVENTION.

Hotchkiss Leads Advance of Bull Moose Leaders Upon Syracuse.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—With the arrival to-night of Provisional State Chairman William H. Hotchkiss and a number of the other leaders the centre of activity of Col. Roosevelt's National Progressive Party in the State will shift from New York to this city where the first State Convention of the movement is scheduled to open on Thursday.

Several thousand of the Colonel's followers here were sorely disappointed to-night at his failure to appear on his way through to St. Louis. The fact that the Colonel would pass through this city and that he would make a speech at the New York Central Station had been widely advertised in the evening papers. When the Colonel's train pulled in about thirty minutes behind schedule time the station was black with the crowd which had been waiting for half an hour or more in a downpour. But the window of the Colonel's compartment remained dark. Before long word was sent out that Col. Roosevelt, worn out with a day of speechmaking under distressing weather conditions, had retired for the night.

Chairman Hotchkiss said to-night that in coming to the convention he had no slate concealed about his person. "We have, of course, been considering candidates for some of the places on the State ticket," he said. "For other places, again, we have not even the remotest idea who the candidates are to be. We hope that somehow we will find among the delegates who gather for the first convention of our party men of this progressive hour whom we can draft as candidates."

Mr. Hotchkiss, Controller Prendergast of New York and Bainbridge Colby are the three men most talked of for the leading place on the ticket.

of the United States to regulate its own commerce in its own way and by its own methods. Neither Great Britain nor any other country, said the President, would surrender such a right.

The arbitration treaty provides that a special agreement shall be concluded defining the scope and method of procedure of the arbitration of the question at issue. This must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. More than two-thirds of the Senators voting on the Panama bill voted for its enactment with the coastwise shipping exemption of which the British Government now complains.

When informed to-night of the announcement that the British Government would make formal demand upon the United States for the arbitration of the Panama Canal tolls question, Huntington Wilson, the acting Secretary of State, said he had no comment to make.

From the attitude of this Government thus far with relation to the dispute, the opinion here is general that the United States will not yield to the demand for arbitration of its right to relieve its coastwise shipping from tolls in the Panama Canal without a prolonged diplomatic struggle. In some quarters the opinion is maintained that the demand will be flatly declined.

In the latest note from Great Britain, presented to the State Department a week ago by Alfred M. Innes, the British Charge, it was set forth that, if a careful reading of the Panama act should justify the impression caused by a first perusal, the British Government would feel it necessary to ask that the question be submitted to The Hague Tribunal.

It is expected that the basis for the State Department's primary declination to accede to this request will be the fact that, as the American coastwise trade has for many years been barred by domestic law to all foreign shipping, it cannot be claimed that British shipping is to be discriminated against by the proposed canal regulations, which at this stage do not apply to foreign commerce. It will be pointed out by the State Department that, so far as that commerce is concerned, British and American shipping will be on terms of perfect equality in the use of the canal.

It is possible that in the absence of Secretary Knox, who is now on his way to Japan, the State Department will content itself with an acknowledgment of the receipt of the British note requesting arbitration, with a promise to return a formal answer thereto at the time of the return of the Secretary of State to Washington in October.

NEGROES IN RIOT TO RESCUE PRISONER

Capt. Sweeney Knocked Down When Reserves Go to Aid of Policeman Hague in Harlem.

MOB STORMS GROCERY STORE

Policeman Seeks Refuge There After Making Arrest for Robbery—Trouble Caused by a Diamond.

Negroes made the corner of Fifth Avenue and 133d Street a place of terror for a brief period last evening. A grocery store was stormed, and several policemen who interfered were knocked down. And it all came from the lure of a huge diamond that glistened in the ring of a white man sauntering down the avenue just after dinner.

The man was Aaron Zwerling, a salesman, whose home is at 1,415 Wilkins Avenue, the Bronx. He was out on the avenue for a stroll, and had just passed 134th Street on his way downtown, when two burly negroes stepped up to him from the shadow of a tenement house doorway. A big, black hand closed over his mouth like a gag. Something hard and heavy hit him a stunning blow on the back of the head and vaguely he felt himself being dragged into the dark hallway.

There were other white men on the street at the time, and these set up a chorus of shouts that brought Patrolman Hague of the Lenox Avenue Station to the rescue. At the sight of him, one of the highwaymen vanished. The other ran squarely into the policeman's arms, which folded around him. There was a scuffle that ended when the handcuffs snapped into place.

Wrist bound to wrist, the policeman and his prisoner set off for the Lenox Avenue Station. Eve- as they left the tenement house entrance, a crowd had gathered in the neighborhood, which is populous with negroes. Men came out of doorways and from around corners in small groups. Hague and his prisoner had not gone half a block when he found he had a following of fifty or seventy-five negroes, who kept close at his heels and groaned and jeered as they walked.

Rapidly the jeers gave place to uglier talk. There were threats, and as the crowd worked itself into a rage against the interfering police, they pushed nearer and nearer till venturesome hands first tilted Hague's hat off and finally showered blows upon his head and shoulders. From then on, there was no restraint, and Hague and his prisoner, to whom he was clamped, were soon rolling on the sidewalk.

The policeman blew his whistle sharply. The circle around the prostrate men widened. Hague jumped to his feet, dragged the negro with him, and by an adroit movement, landed him in a grocery store at the corner of 133d Street. He locked the door, and sent the news of his predicament to his chief, Lieut. Devine of the Lenox Avenue Station. Acting Capt. Sweeney's eyes brightened as Devine told him the story.

The five reserves were soon on their way with Sweeney at their head. Lieut. Devine was directed to call the patrol wagon from the East 126th Street Station. With their sticks in their hands and their jaws set, the six men hurried to the corner where their fellow policeman was besieged in the grocery. When they got there—and only a few moments had elapsed—a crowd of five hundred negroes was outside the slenderly fortified store. Sweeney and his men charged into the heart of the crowd, and were admitted to the grocery by Hague. As they tried to bring his prisoner out, they were stormed from every side, and bricks and bottles began to fall in a shower from the nearby roofs. While the reserves were forming a close bodyguard for Hague and his captive and battling stubbornly, Sweeney was dragged down and into the gutter where some men began to pound him. Just then there was a shout up the street, for at full speed, the patrol wagon from the East 126th Street Station was coming to the rescue, overflowing with reserves.

At sight of them the crowd melted away like magic, and the Lenox Avenue Station men emerged dirty, torn and weary but still possessed of their prisoner. They had even acquired three more.

The man whom the police accuse of attacking and trying to hold-up Zwerling said that he was John Purnell of 508 West 125th Street. Charles Howard of 2 East 134th Street was accused of being Capt. Sweeney's assailant. The other prisoners were William Hudson of 16 West 134th Street, and Mack Brothers of 2,168 Fifth Avenue.

and evidence of all kinds in regard to the contributions of Standard Oil in 1904. The committee has received nothing from the Standard Oil Company except the statement of Mr. Archbold himself.

In explanation of the circumstances that his statement was not accompanied by documents of any kind to establish certain facts that must rest only on personal assertions of himself and others, unless other evidence is forthcoming, it was pointed out to-day that Senator Clapp did not subpoena Mr. Archbold, but invited him to come to Washington and tell what he knew.

Mr. Clapp was informed by Standard Oil officials that Mr. Archbold had left 26 Broadway to go to Europe, and that it would not be possible for him to come to Washington. But when he was found at his country place and asked to appear before the committee, he agreed to avail himself of the opportunity, if he could be permitted to take the 3 o'clock train to New York the day he appeared, so as to catch his steamer for Europe the next day. He came in a hurry, without having a chance to search his files for documents, which, according to his testimony, would prove the truth of many statements that he made from recollection.

There has been some criticism of the committee for not cross-examining Mr. Archbold closely to draw out many facts that are now coming to light in piecemeal. At that time the Clapp Sub-Committee was not authorized to investigate the entire matter. The committee, Senator Clapp has said, would have acted very differently had it had the wide authorization embodied in the resolution which was passed three days after Mr. Archbold testified.

REFUSE TO MENTION TAFT.

Ohio Republican State Candidates Are Non-Committal in Choice of Leaders.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 2.—The State Convention of the Bull Moose Party will assemble to-morrow afternoon, and after the committees are named an adjournment will be taken until the following day, when a full State ticket will be nominated. There will be 1,500 delegates and James R. Garfield will be the Temporary Chairman.

State Chairman Daugherty finally succeeded in getting eight of the candidates on the regular Republican ticket to sign a statement assuring the voters that they were out-and-out Republicans. The candidates refused to allow mention of President Taft's name in the statement. The Chairman had desired an unequivocal declaration for the President, which would be tantamount to a rejection of Roosevelt and the Progressive Party.

Walter F. Brown, Chairman of the third party State Central Committee, however, intimated to-night that he had lost faith in the candidate who signed the statement and that in all probability not one of them would be indorsed by the convention. He said the only candidates on the regular Republican ticket who, according to present arrangements, would be indorsed are Sullivan for Secretary of State, Eagleson for Attorney General, Kirtley for Board of Public Works, and possibly Langdon for Congressman at Large.

There are two candidates for Governor, Arthur I. Garford and Edward Erskine. The former will pobably be the nominee.

The question as to whether women shall have a voice in the election of public officials is also interesting Ohio politicians of all parties. The suffrage question will be determined to-morrow at the special election, at which forty-two amendments to the Constitution framed at the recent convention will be accepted or rejected. Should suffrage be adopted by the voters, the women of the State will have won a victory which has been years in the making. Along with suffrage, the interest in the campaign has centred about the initiative and referendum, liquor license, abolition of capital punishment, and municipal home rule for cities.

FIGHT FOR KANSAS ELECTORS

Bull Moosers and Republicans Argue Case Before Judge Sanborn.

DENVER, Sept. 2.—Judge Frank Sanborn of the Federal court took under advisement late to-day the temporary restraining order cases in which an attempt is being made to prevent Charles Sessions, Secretary of State of Kansas, from certifying to County Clerks of that State the names of eight Presidential Electors, who have declared in favor of Roosevelt for President.

D. R. Hite, who opened the case for the plaintiffs, argued that so long as the names of eight Electors were obtained by irregular methods, they had no right to be placed on the regular Republican ticket.

John Dawson, Attorney General of Kansas, asked the court for an opinion as to whether the names of Roosevelt and Johnson and Taft and Sherman could be placed on the same ticket.

L. W. Keplinger, representing the Roosevelt Electors, read two affidavits, one by J. M. Dolley, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Kansas, and the other by John H. Stewart. Mr. Dolley affirmed his belief that Taft and Sherman were nominated at Chicago by fraud; that the Roosevelt faction represented the Republican Party in Kansas, and that the Electors who declared for Roosevelt should be put on the Republican ticket.

Stewart, who is one of the Electors, said he did not declare at any time, nor did his supporters say, that he would support Taft as the Republican nominee, but that he concluded that he could not conscientiously vote for Taft for President or Sherman for Vice President, in view of the methods adopted for their nomination.

TAFT AGAIN ON THE ROAD.

Departs from Beverly for Washington To-day—Will Meet Mrs. Taft Here.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 2.—The President is leaving Beverly to-morrow for Washington. On the way he will stop at Boston to address the National Association of Post Office Employes at Faneuil Hall, and will dine with Congressman John W. Weeks at the Algonquin Club. The President is due in Washington on Wednesday morning and will leave there on Thursday for New York to meet Mrs. Taft.

Charles D. Hilles, Chairman of the National Committee, and George R. Sheldon, Treasurer, will make the trip on the Mayflower from New York to New London, where the President is to address the New England Waterways Convention in that city on Friday. The conference will be the first of real importance since the notification at Washington. The President will return to Beverly on Saturday on the Mayflower.

The President was scheduled to-day to visit the horse show of the Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, but after playing golf with his son Charlie in cold, disagreeable weather and feeling the effects of the exercise, he decided not to attend the show.

The President has appointed Luther S. Fountain of East Orange, N. J., as Pension Agent for Northern New Jersey and Southern New York on the recommendations of the Secretary of the Interior and the Pension Bureau. Mr. Fountain has been Acting Pension Agent since the death of Gen. Michael Kerwin last June.

For the first time since coming to Beverly this season the President had a political caller this afternoon in the person of James P. Goodridge, a Taft leader from Indiana. Mr. Goodridge brought some encouraging news from the Hoosier State.

IGNORE PARTY LABELS WILSON TELLS LABOR

Says Roosevelt Would Make the People Puppets of a National Board Headed by Capitalists.

NOT DIVINELY APPOINTED

As Roosevelt Claims to Be—No Man Big Enough to be Providence—10,000 Hear Him at Buffalo.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The message of Gov. Woodrow Wilson, as delivered today to 10,000 Buffalo workingmen and directed also to the workingmen of the Nation as a whole, was that Theodore Roosevelt's programme, while admirable in its intentions, would, if carried out, make the people nothing more than mere wards and puppets of a National Board of Guardians, with such men as Frick and Gary as its supervising heads.

Gov. Wilson denounced Col. Roosevelt for his overwhelming egotism, not only in his speech to the workingmen, but in five other speeches made in Buffalo and environs. He appealed to the people not to let Roosevelt, "a self-appointed divinity," save them, but "hump themselves" and through united counsel save themselves.

The Roosevelt proposal to encourage and regulate the trusts, Gov. Wilson said, was one that filled him with genuine concern for the liberties of the people. He urged every despondent workingman who had no outlook but to sweat through his life to its very end to read carefully the Bull Moose platform, with its proposal for a plan of government by a "Board of Experts," and then take hope in the Democratic proposal against the coming of a day, through the regulation of competition instead of monopoly, when "every wage slave can look up and say to his fellow men: 'I, too, am of the free breed of American citizens.'"

At no time did Gov. Wilson ask the people to look upon himself as having any divine appointment such as he said Col. Roosevelt was claiming. He asked the people, instead of looking to him for leadership which they could follow blindly, to flock to their school houses for debate among themselves, and to their public forums "to organize public opinion, that great force which underlies all politics and which has too long, to the sorrow of all of us, been left unorganized in an age of organization."

Public opinion, once it was organized, the Governor insisted, would cure all the present political ills, and he announced that for himself, come what might, he proposed to dedicate his life hereafter to presenting, as attorney for the people, all the facts he could possibly find out about their Government.

He indicated that he had a great many facts about the Government in his possession which, if outlined to the people, would startle them. He promised to outline them all very soon, but not until he could find "the psychological moment."

"What is the use of firing them off," he said, "until the people you want to shoot at are in range? When they are present, it is good sport, then, to go after them, and that I propose to do.

His Social Uplift Aims.

"I propose to tell what I can find out in every court to which I can gain entrance. I do not mean as a lawyer, for while it is true that I was once a lawyer, I have repented. I mean in the courts of public opinion, for the whole strength of politics is not in the leaders, but in the followers. My kind of leading will not be telling other people what they have got to do. By leading I mean finding out what the interests of the community are agreed to be, and then trying my level best to find the methods of solution by common counsel. That is the only feasible programme of social uplift that I can imagine, and, therefore, I am bound in conscience to fight everything that crystallizes things so at the centre that you cannot break in.

"It is amazing to me that public-spirited, devoted men have not seen that the third party proclaims purposes and in the same breath provides an organization which makes the carrying out of those purposes impossible. God forbid that in a democratic country we should resign the task of governing ourselves and give the Government over to experts.

"As to the monopolies, which Mr. Roosevelt proposes to legalize and to welcome, I know that they are so many ears of juggernaut, and I do not look forward with pleasure to the time when the juggernauts are licensed and driven by commissioners of the United States. I am willing to license automobiles, but not juggernauts, because if a man ever takes a joy ride in a juggernaut, I would like to know what is to become of the rest of us, because the road is not wide enough for the rest of us to get out of the way. We would have to take to the woods and set the woods on fire.

"And what has created these monopolies? Unregulated competition. It has permitted these men to do anything they chose to do to squeeze their rivals out and crush their rivals to the earth. We know the processes by which they have done those things. We can prevent these processes through remedial legislation, and so restrict the wrong use of competition that the right use of competition will destroy monopoly. Ours is a programme of liberty; theirs a programme of regulation.

"I want you workingmen to grasp that point, because I want to say to you right now that the programme I propose does not look quite so much like acting as a Providence for you as the other programme looks. I want frankly to say to you that I am not big enough to play Providence, and my objection to the other plan is that I do not believe there is any man who is big enough to play Providence.

"In my time I have read a good deal of history, and if I were to sum up the whole history of liberty I should say it consisted at every turn of life in resisting the accumulation of regulative power in the hands of a few persons.

"If you do not believe it, try it. If you want a great struggle for liberty, that will cost you blood, adopt the Roosevelt regulative programme, put yourself at the disposal of a Providence resident at Washington, and then see what will come of it."

"Forget Party Labels."

In all his speeches, whether made in doors or from the tonneau of his automobile, Gov. Wilson appealed to the voters to forget their party labels and vote independently. He pledged for himself that if elected he would not let any bosses fool him, "not even the bosses of the Democratic Party."

He urged that the Democrats everywhere should clean up their own party and keep it clean and free to work the will of the people.

"I am a party man," he said, "and I believe in a party organization except where the party organization goes to seed and becomes a machine, and then I think that part of the organization ought to be cut off; but I am for something that will dominate party organizations, and that is an organized public opinion, which will say at every election: 'You can't drive us into a pen, you can't label us, you can't tell us how we are going to vote by the brand on the ticket. We are going to find out who made the ticket and who's on the ticket and what the programme is behind the ticket, and we are going to choose accordingly.'"

In his tour through Buffalo and the surrounding country Gov. Wilson was occupied for two consecutive hours. It was his longest campaign tour since he became a candidate, and he showed clearly that his experience with the crowds in Pennsylvania last week was benefitting him in the way he began to show evidence of knowing the knack of answering his greeters in a way to interest them.

The Governor arrived here at 10 o'clock this morning, after having spent the night on the New York Central express train. He left again at 10:30 o'clock to-night, thoroughly tired out, after having stood in line for three hours at the Hotel Lafayette to receive handshakers, and having made six speeches, two in halls, one from an open-air platform, and one from the tonneau of his automobile at a country crossroad.

The Governor was met at the station upon his arrival by a committee of the United Trades and Labor Council, which had abandoned its usual Labor Day parade in order to hold a picnic, with Gov. Wilson as the "guest of honor," at Braun's Park. Mayor Louis P. Fuhrmann and Norman E. Mack, former National Chairman, accompanied the labor committeemen, but did not attempt to interefere with the plan of hospitalities as the labor men had arranged it.

Gov. Wilson was driven in a red automobile to the Lafayette Hotel through streets across which three Taft banners were strung. At the hotel Norman E. Mack explained to the Governor that the three Taft banners were significant, as there was little Bull Moose sentiment in the city and county, while Taft sentiment was very strong. He said he was sure that Mr. Taft would give the Democrats a hard, but losing, fight, the city and county being safe for Gov. Wilson by a good-sized majority.

Gov. Wilson's hard work began the minute he reached the Lafayette Hotel. Several hundreds of people were waiting to shake hands, and he took a position in one corner of the lobby to accommodate them. The line of people, never seeming to grow smaller, passed in front of the Governor for an hour.

The Governor then entered an automobile again and was driven to the Catholic Young Men's National Union, where several hundred young men were in convention, presided over by Father Mulhall. Gov. Wilson urged them to vote as independents and never as followers of a party label.

"Fingy" Conners Calls.

At the Hotel Lafayette, upon his return, the Governor found another mass of people waiting to shake hands. He accommodated them until Norman E. Mack whispered to him that the former boss, W. J. ("Fingy") Conners was up stairs waiting to see him. A score or more of the leading Buffalo politicians followed Gov. Wilson to a room on the third floor of the hotel. The door was kept open all the time the Governor and Conners were in conference, and most of the twenty politicians and several reporters remained in the room.

"You know," the former boss explained, "I was telling them all the time you were a live one, and they wouldn't take my word for it. There were times when I was the only Wilson man in the county." Conners looked closely at Norman E. Mack, with whom he has fallen out in politics, while he was speaking. Then with a twist of his hand toward Mr. Mack, he added, "But they're all Wilson around here now."

Mr. Mack and the others laughed, and one of them admitted they had "to eat a good deal of crow lately," but at the same time they liked it.

Mr. Conners seemed to be the happiest man in Buffalo, because he had picked Wilson for a winner before the others. On the occasion of Gov. Wilson's last visit to Buffalo, Mr. Conners explained, he had hardly had a single greeter except Conners.

Mr. Mack had luncheon served to Gov. Wilson and his party at the hotel. They ate standing, with food served from a sideboard, and, while they still held their coffee cups, they insisted on a speech from their guest.

"You know," said Gov. Wilson, "I am suited to be the centre of counsel if men will frankly counsel me, and I have lived long enough to distinguish between those who are frankly counseling me and those who are not. I can tell a bluff when I see it. I was embarrased while running for Governor and asking the people for votes, but I was not in the least embarrassed after they had elected me, and I was able to tackle some of the gentlemen who didn't trust me."

The Governor took another fling at the politicians a little later, when he said that some very intelligent men have been keeping back progress in this country because they could not see that the interests of the humble and weak were inseparably linked with the interests of the strong and powerful, and that the interests of all must be served equally in order for any permanently to benefit.

Shortly after luncheon the Governor and enough politicians to fill five automobiles motored out to the labor picnic at Braun's Park. A little girl came forward with a large bouquet of roses, as the Governor's car came to a stop, and the Governor picked her up and kissed her. Then he carried the roses to the speaker's stand. For an hour before the Governor's arrival a heavy rain had been falling, and it had driven the people to cover.

Crowd Grows to 10,000.

The sun came out as he commenced to speak, and the people poured in from all directions. The Governor commenced speaking to a few hundred people only, but before he concluded 10,000 were grouped about the open-air platform. As the speech proceeded, cries of "Right you are!" were heard at frequent intervals, and there was heavy cheering as the Governor tried to leave

Before returning to Buffalo, Gov. Wilson was driven ten miles out of the city to Kenmore, where he found about 1,500 people lined up in front of the village hall. He told them how much they could all strengthen the power of any leader by just organizing and backing him against the bosses, whom he would have to fight.

At the Wilson and Marshall Club, in the Prudential Life Building, Buffalo, Gov. Wilson found another audience waiting for him. He was assured that his hearers were independent voters, most of whom had been Republicans.

"And that is the reason," he told them, "why the Democratic Party is coming out of the woods. The party is a freer and more sensitive instrument for the service of the people than it ever was before.

"Suppose Roosevelt was elected—I am leaving out Mr. Taft because we now believe the Republican Party belongs to the old order of things; we all know what would happen if Mr. Taft should be elected—nothing. But if Roosevelt were elected you would have a candidate belonging to a new party with party lines crisscrossed and variegated all through Congress, and out of that there wouldn't come a combined force to accomplish anything. It would be a period between periods when everything was disorganized. The men whom the Democrats prefer this year belong all along the line to the new age. We have got a team to tackle the new job, and nothing but a team is equal to it. And our boasted harmony—it isn't from pressure, it isn't amalgam, it is a chemical mixture got together by a union of men anxious to serve the country. That is the reason the Democrats are coming out of the woods by the thousands and pricking up their ears."

Another reception and a dinner and then a final speech at a Democratic mass meeting in the Broadway Arsenal completed the Governor's twelve-hour day.

Calls Taft Stupid.

The ovation which greeted the Governor at the Arsenal from 7,000 people assembled there lasted four minutes.

Gov. Wilson expressed his respect for the Socialist Party as one wishing good things, and then denounced the "old standpat Republican Party," and President Taft as a leader who was so stupid that he did not grasp the consequences of his acts upon the country at large.

Gov. Wilson returned late to-night to Trenton.

WOMEN IN POLITICS WORK ON LABOR DAY

Rush Goes On for Them at Republican and Bull Moose Headquarters.

EASIER THAN SUFFRAGE WORK

So They Don't Mind It—List of Women Delegates to Bull Moose Convention Given Out.

The women politicians were at work yesterday without regard to the fact that Labor Day is a holiday. Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Miss Mary Francis, and Miss Mary Wood were at the Taft headquarters in the Times Building, where they were preparing to enlarge their floor space by taking two extra rooms with Mrs. Elmer Black on the fourteenth floor.

Mrs. Borden Harriman's Wilson and Marshall quarters in the Fifth Avenue Building were closed and the National headquarters of the Progressive Party in the Hotel Manhattan did not open, but at the State Bull Moose quarters, 16 East Twenty-eighth Street, business was going on as usual, and the women were unusually busy. They say there that politics is simply fun compared with suffrage work, as money and workers float in to them on every wave.

"It is simply child's play compared with suffrage," said Miss Alice Carpenter. "I have worked Massachusetts for suffrage and succeeded after a fashion, but here we have been working only three weeks and we have over 150 women delegates to the Syracuse convention. I said we'd have 150, but I hardly believed it myself.

"Then it is wonderful the way the women are coming to the front with campaign funds. A check came in from Mrs. Winston Churchill, New Hampshire, this morning. Mrs. Dexter P. Rumsey of Buffalo has sent a contribution and there are so many others that we have on hand money enough to cover the expenses of the women's work until election and we will now be able to contribute to the general fund. It is delightful the way the women have come forward."

Women were working yesterday at the State Bull Moose headquarters getting out the 10,000 post cards that are to be circulated to bring in members. One of the workers, a volunteer, was Mrs. Laura M. Thomas of Chicago, who is visiting the East. Mrs. Thomas, who was one of the founders of the Clio Noonday Rest of Chicago, where luncheon is provided every day for 1,000 young business women, has been a Republican all her life until this year and attended every political convention held in Chicago since she was a small girl. She attended, as a little girl, the convention at the old Wigwam, when Lincoln was nominated and she was taken by her parents from the Sacred Heart Academy, where she was at school, in the middle of the night, to avoid the crowd, and at 2 o'clock A. M. stood at the bier of Abraham Lincoln. She broke the rule in not being able to attend either of the conventions in Chicago this year, but yesterday she had volunteered to stamp post cards for the Bull Moose Party to which she has given her allegiance.

Among the women delegates and alternates to the Progressive Party Convention at Syracuse from New York County are:

Miss Maud Ingersoll, daughter of the late Robert Ingersoll, 117 East Twenty-first Street; Miss Elizabeth Sufrin, Miss Florence Guernsey, 2 West Eighty-sixth Street; Mrs. Harriett Johnston-Wood, Miss Alle Fossler, Columbia University; Mrs. M. N. Overland, 2 West 109d Street; Mrs. Milton Le Cluse, 18 West Thirty-fourth Street; Miss Rebecca James, 540 West 122d Street; Mrs. W. G. Brown, 2,502 Eighth Avenue; Mrs. James J. Fitzgerald, 947 Sheridan Avenue; Mrs. W. G. Demerest, 559 East 156th Street; Mrs. William C. Demerest, 68 East Sixty-sixth Street; Mrs. William Grant Brown, 100 Broadway; Mrs. Henry H. Andrews, 507 West End Avenue; Mrs. Daniel H. Thorpe, alternate; Mrs. Hughes Cox, 30 East Thirty-fourth Street; Mrs. David Armstrong, 2,412 Broadway; Mrs. Denis P. Carey, 19 West 103d Street; Mrs. Aimee Hutchinson, 877 West End Avenue; Mrs. Alice Snitje Burke, 2,489 Broadway; Miss Dora Davis, 130 West 104th Street; Miss Anna Rhodes, 365 West End Avenue; Mrs. Charles H. Nolte, 301 East Sixty-eighth Street; Mrs. H. S. Plimpton, 640 West 139th Street; Mrs. Foord, 640 West 139th Street; alternate; Mrs. Oscar Kelly, 507 West 157th Street; Miss Adele O'Connor, 598 West 191st Street; Mrs. Anna L. Reiter, 24 East 97th Street; Miss Clara B. Morrison, Mrs. Samuel A. Herzog, 71 East Eighty-seventh Street; Mrs. Dudley Palmer Smagg, 51 East 128th Street; Mrs. Clara Erigson, 409 East 136th Street; Mrs. J. T. Penfield, Mrs. H. Fleming, 1,043 So. Boulevard; Mrs. Mary E. Roko, 1,245 Tinton Avenue; Mrs. Julia D. Tobias, 1,773 Washington Avenue; Mrs. Julia Schwarzier, 1,018 179th Street; Mrs. Daniel Danehy, 2,376 Briggs Avenue; Mrs. Helen Secor Tonjes, 2,555 East 174th Street; Miss Ray Ronginsky, 154 Henry Street; Miss Sadie Weinerman, 240 East Broadway; Miss Elizabeth Frank, Miss Jennie Levine, Miss Mathilde Schroeder, Miss Bertha Rembaugh, Mrs. Nicholas Murray, 236 West Tenth Street; Miss Susie Hachfelder, 330 East Fourth Street; Mrs. Louis Glucknam, 89 Avenue B; Mrs. Moses B. Fertig, 98 Avenue B; Mrs. W. D. Grimshaw, 466 West Twenty-second Street.

From Kings County the woman delegates are:

Miss Mary E. Dreier, 6 Montague Terrace; Mrs. Lydia Smith, 178 Duffield Street; Miss Helen Van Ingen, 135 Henry Street; Miss Sarah Stephenson, 129 Columbia Heights; Mrs. Edward Dreier, 35 Remsen Street; Mrs. Catherine Jacobson, 115 Johnson Street; Miss Amy Wren, 129 Columbia Heights; Mrs. Charles H. Winslow, 433 Clinton Street; Mrs. Sarah Meyer, Degraw and Clinton Streets; Miss Elizabeth Vail, Miss Rose Meyer, 359 Clinton Street; Dr. Jennie V. H. Baker, 512 Bedford Avenue; Mrs. Grace H. Childs, 53 Prospect Park West; Miss Ida Mulrannan, 277 Gates Avenue; Miss Mary Bulger, 277 Gates Avenue; Mrs. William H. Tappey, 422 First Street; Mrs. W. Lamb, 485 Sixth Avenue; Mrs. R. D. Duychinck, 396 Third Street; Mrs. George A. Green, 539 Fourth Street, Mrs. R. H. Elder, 80 Willow Street; Mrs. Gizella Widder, 128 South Second Street; Mrs. Bella Tokaji, 1,246 Thirty-ninth Street; Mrs. Grace Greenwood Wolterbeck, 424 East Ninth Street; Mrs. Fred W. Heinrich, 8 McDonough Street; Miss Alida Bernard, 18 Arlington Place; Mrs. Joseph Dermody, 245 Monroe Street; Mrs. Frederick Washburn, 20 Kingston Avenue; Mrs. Jennie E. Peck, 255 Tompkins Avenue; the Rev. Ann Allebach, 939 St. Mark's Avenue; Mrs. Frank Palmland, 1,013 Pacific Street; Mrs. Elizabeth Osborn, Mrs. Otto Wicks, 221 Hamburg Avenue; Miss Antoinette Wicks, 231 Hamburg Avenue; Mrs. Gus Ruhlin, 1,490 Myrtle Avenue; Miss Rose Schultz, 1,490 Myrtle Avenue; Mrs. S. Bertha Greenblatt, 90 Graham Avenue; Miss Rose Lehman, 101 Debevoise Street.

Among delegates from Westchester County are Mrs. John Corbin and Mrs. Charles Scribner.

Miss Mary Donnelly, who ran Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's Fourteenth Assembly District Club and lunchroom in East Thirty-fourth Street, has been nominated by her old friends of that district as delegate to the Syracuse Convention, and has been asked by them to help with their work in the new Bull Moose headquarters they are to open.

The women of the Republican National Committee yesterday issued what they called "A Labor Day Hint." It was to say to the wage earners that the Republican Party had their best interests at heart and that they lost in Cleveland's Administration what they did not get back until Republicanism came in with McKinley again, and telling them not to decide in haste to repent after Nov. 5.

SUFFRAGE CARNIVAL PLANS.

Miners and University Girls in Costume Features of Parade.

Efforts are being made to get special railroad rates for the suffrage carnival the first week in November, which will wind up with a big night parade on Nov. 9. There are to be 250 decorated and illuminated automobiles in this parade, five foats, and the thousands of marchers will be in various costumes or represent their professions and will carry torches and lanterns. A hundred college and university girls in Greek costume will head the procession, singing a song of victory composed for the occasion. All of the States where women are enfranchised will send delegations.

Among the delegations of workers the miners will dress as they do for work in the mine and wear their miners' lamps in their hats. The automobiles will carry speakers who will make addresses at different points along the line of march. The Men's League, R. C. Beadle, Executive Secretary, 11 Broadway, is sending out invitations to every National Guardsman in the State of New York, whether a suffragist or not, to march, and asking that the invitation be posted in the armories. Captains for voluntary service, each to be in charge of twenty-five men, are also in demand for the Men's League division in the parade. They will be supplied with standards, company, regiment, and divisional number as soon as they report their willingness to act.

BULL MOOSERS DIVIDED.

Senator Dixon Fails to Reconcile Opposing Factions in Colorado.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 2.—Senator Joseph M. Dixon failed in his mission here to unite the Progressive Republican Party of Colorado with the Progressive Party. Leaving early to-day for Salt Lake City to confer with the Progessives there, he carried the knowledge that there were two sets of Roosevelt supporters in this State who are irreconcilable opponents as to the composition of the State Progressive ticket.

The Progressive Republican Party of Colorado, represented by Philip B. Stewart, M. D. Vincent and Attorney General Griffith, formally severed all connections and negotiations with the Progressive Party, of which Edward P. Costigan and Judge Ben Lindsey are the recognized leaders.

Stewart, Vincent and Griffith in a statement declared the Progressive Republican Party of Colorado would participate in regular Republican primaries Sept. 10.

The announcement came after practically forty-eight hours of conference with Mr. Dixon, Gov. Johnson, Progressive Party Vice Presidential candidate; Judge Lindsey, and E. P. Costigan. The negotiations came to an end when Stewart declined to withdraw his name as candidate for Governor at the September primaries of the Republican Party and accept instead from the Progressive Party exclusively the nomination for United States Senator, long term, thus throwing the support of his followers to the State Progressive organization, whose candidate for Governor is E. P. Costigan.

The Progressive Republicans, while remaining in the regular organization, announce they will support the National Progressive ticket and work for Roosevelt's electors.

Senator Dixon, closing the conference, held a second with the State Progressive Party to fill vacancies. It was there decided the Progressive Party would put a full ticket in the field. F. D. Catlin of Montrose was slated for United States Senator, long term, which Stewart rejected; C. F. Fisher of Sterling and D. C. Burns of Denver were named for Congressmen at Large.

GERARD BACK; WOULD ACCEPT

But Gubernatorial Nomination Hasn't Been Offered Yet, He Says.

Supreme Court Justice Gerard returned yesterday from Europe on the George Washington, accompanied by Mrs. Gerard. He said that having been shooting grouse in Scotland, he had lost touch with political happenings in this country. The Justice had apparently not heard any talk about the Democratic nomination for Governor being offered to him, but when asked if he would accept it, he replied: "Why not? But it has not been offered to me yet."

He added that there was no reason why game preserves should not be a financial success in this country, as there were better shooting lands than those on the other side.

"If any farmers will bunch 50,000 acres of land together," he said, "I will find the stock and the keepers. The season's shooting in Scotland realizes $6,000,000 a year."

SEES REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

Congressman Campbell Predicts Majority of 7,000 to 15,000 in Vermont.

Congressman Philip P. Campbell of Kansas, who has been campaigning in Vermont in the interest of the Republican ticket, returned to New York yesterday and predicted a Republican victory in that State at the polls to-day.

"Col. Roosevelt has made a whirlwind tour of the State and has spoken to large crowds," said the Congressman, "but he has made no impression on the people and the doctrines he preaches do not appeal to them in the least. His reception at Rutland demonstrated only his drawing power as a curiosity. His appeal to the people there fell absolutely flat and the same is true of the large meeting at Randolph which I attended.

"In my opinion the Republican candidate for Governor will be elected by a majority of 7,000 to 15,000."

TAFT GAINING IN INDIANA.

Republican Poll, It Is Said, Shows Roosevelt Is Losing Ground.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 2.—Returns from the Republican poll of the State are reaching headquarters, and the officers in charge are now confident that the Roosevelt strength is waning, and that President Taft is growing stronger every day with the party members. The changes have been so radical in some sections that the poll takers were instructed to take the poll again, but the second poll verified the first, and there is no longer any question of its correctness. Tabulations from 100 precincts, covering all parts of the State, show that the Taft vote is running about ten to one for Roosevelt, and that the Democratic vote is close to the poll of two and four years ago.

In Montgomery County, where the Republican vote for President in 1908 was 4,401, the poll of two-thirds of the county has revealed only 151 Bull Moosers. It is estimated that there are not more than 200 Roosevelt men in Clinton County, and scarcely half that number in Newton County. Reports from other counties, the Republican leaders say, show that there is more noise than substance to the Bull Moose cause in Indiana.

Another thing shown by the investigation, it is said, is that the Bull Moose candidate for Governor is likely to run behind Roosevelt in Indiana. Indications point to the Socialists making large gains.

For $25 Down, This New Model $675 Pianola Piano

$67.50 down, is the regular first payment on an instrument of this price at Aeolian Hall. This week only you may have it for just $25 down, because we are getting ready to move.

This is a genuine opportunity, for the instrument is one of the world-famous group of six Pianola Pianos. It is a new model, combining the widely-known Stuyvesant piano and the new full-scale (88-note) Pianola. It is an instrument better by far than any other player-piano in the world, excepting the more expensive Steinway and Weber Pianola Pianos.

STUYVESANT PIANOLA PIANO

You may pay any price, however high, for a player-piano elsewhere, without securing the improvements and important musical features offered by the new model Stuyvesant Pianola Piano.

Think of what this small outlay of $25 will bring you. First of all, a piano, to be played by hand, with a tone so exquisite that Homer Bartlett, the composer, said: "I would advise everyone thinking of buying a piano to see the Stuyvesant before any other." Then it brings a piano you can play, musician or not. Draw back the panels, insert a Pianola music-roll and there you are:—the world of music is yours. The Metrostyle is there to guide you in its easy way to artistic interpretation. There is the Themodist, which, without attention on your part accentuates melody notes and softens the accompaniment.

$25—think of it—is going to bring you all this and more. If you are considering the purchase of a Player-Piano now, or at some future time, you cannot afford to let this opportunity pass by.

Pianola Pianos are manufactured only by the Aeolian Company, and in Manhattan are shown only at Aeolian Hall. Their reputation is world-wide, for they consist of the genuine Pianola in combination with six great pianos—

the Steinway, Steck, Wheelock, Stuyvesant, Stroud and famous Weber

'REBECCA' CORDIALLY RECEIVED IN LONDON

But Americans Constitute a Large Part of the Audience and Real Test Is to Come.

A WEEK OF FIRST NIGHTS

Parker's "Drake" to be Produced To-night and a New Piece by the Author of "Bunty" To-morrow.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" charmed the first-night audience to-night at Charles Frohman's Globe Theatre, where Klaw & Erlanger's production of Kate Douglas Wiggin's play was presented by Joseph Brooks.

It must be said that a good proportion of the audience was American, and to-night's success was not necessarily a gauge to the play's appeal to the general theatregoing public of London. One experienced judge said that the excessive sentimentality and occasional "namby-pambyism" of the piece would not be to the taste of British metropolitan audiences. That is to be seen, but there is no question that to-night the audience appreciated the play to the full and gave unstinted applause to it.

The authoress, who occupied a box with Mme. De Navarro, (Mary Anderson,) came before the curtain after the fourth act, evidently in a condition of great nervousness, and bowed her thanks. Her lips moved as if she were speaking, but no words were audible amid the din of applause. The applause was redoubled when she came before the curtain a second time, holding Edith Taliaferro by the hand, and then drawing the little actres into a fervent embrace.

Miss Taliaferro's success was equal to that of the play, while Sam Coit as Abner, Archie Boyd as Jeremiah, and, particularly, Hayward Guin as Adam Ladd, made an excellent impression. Marie L. Day as Miranda and Leila Frost as Emma Jane were distinguished among the women in the cast.

The Morning Post to-morrow will advise everybody to "make friends with Rebecca." It adds:

"The child is a revelation, and so is the play. Both are American at the very best and rarest—the sort of American with which, most unhappily, the average Englishman is all too unfamiliar."

The Daily Express says: "It is all very pretty, very harmless, and as hopeful as the poems of Ella Wheeler Wilcox."

The Daily Mail says: "It is only fair to all concerned to say that the acting is as good as we could expect in a slight play of such obvious sentiment."

The Times says: "It is all very scrappy and unsubstantial, but all very fresh and innocent, and from the strangeness of manners and language not without a certain piquancy. Rebecca, as played by Miss Taliaferro, is a charming little imp, though we are not sure that we are not more in love with her young friend, Emma Jane, who seems to us more impish still, and perhaps—but this is mere conjecture—more truly representative of the State of Maine."

The Daily Chronicle, after declaring that the play has obvious faults, being mechanical and full of padding, says:

"Yet somehow or other 'Rebecca' undoubtedly raised a lump in a good many English throats, and on the whole won the hearts of the English audience."

The week that opened to-night with "Rebecca" will be a strenuous one in London theatrical annals. There is a première every night except Friday, and on some nights there are two new pieces.

Louis Parker's "Drake" begins to-morrow at His Majesty's, with Lynn Harding, who later on in the season will go to America, in the title rôle.

A new piece by Graham Moffatt, the author of the very successful "Bunty Pulls the Strings," is down for production on Wednesday at the Comedy.

Thursday will see Marie Tempest in a new comedy by a new author at the Prince of Wales's, and "The Girl in the Taxi," a new musical play adapted from the French, at the Lyric.

On Saturday Gus Kerker's "Grass Widows" will be produced at the Apollo.

"Fanny's First Play" is ending its long run here this week, but it will open in New York before the month is out, a strong company engaged by the Shuberts sailing next Wednesday. According to present arrangements, Granville Barker is not going to superintend the New York production, as he had planned, as he is too busy here, among other things with a production of Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" without cuts.

Arthur Bourchier and Violet Vanbrugh to-night, after a holiday, resumed their parts in "The Third Degree," which has been running all the Summer with great success, despite reports to the contrary published in a New York paper.

What for the time was known as the Whitney Theatre was opened to-night under the name of the Strand Theatre with the musical play, "The Glad Eye," transferred from the Apollo in the height of its success. The several managers who have tried operations at this theatre with poor results will now find their dictum that it is a "hoodoo house" put to a new test.

Joseph Brooks will sail on Thursday with the two English companies that he has formed for the American productions of "Milestones" in New York and Chicago respectively. Both companies have been playing in England, and that destined for New York, with Leslie Faber and Auriol Lee in the principal parts, has been winning the highest encomiums.

Another English company to sail for America this week is that formed by George Tyler for the Chicago production of "The New Sin." The author, Macdonald Hastings, will sail at the same time to superintend the rehearsals. Cyril Keightly and Julian Lestrange are the principal members of the company.

$60,000 FOR NAPOLEON VILLA.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The Villa San Martino, Napoleon's house during his exile in the Isle of Elba, was sold by auction before the court at Portoferrajo to-day to the Marquis Ruspoli for $60,000.

Doubts as to the probability of Napoleon having occupied the house, expressed by Frédéric Masson, the Napoleonic historian, are combated in to-day's Excelsior by Léon Conseil, who declares that an autograph letter from Napoleon dated at the Villa San Martino exists. He adds that Queen Alexandra paid two visits to the villa, and on both occasions inhabited the rooms once occupied by Napoleon.

The villa was part of the estate of the late Prince Demidoff, who bought it at the death of Prince Jerome Bonaparte, and tried, with indifferent success, to make an income out of the building by placing in it a number of Napoleonic relics, calling it a museum, and admitting the public on payment of a fee.

The villa, it appears certain, was built by the Emperor's order, and it is presumed that he himself lived in it, though there is no direct evidence to that effect. He intended it for his sister, Princess Pauline, and she succeeded to it and the estate that goes with it.

The objects which constituted the Napoleonic museum in the villa were sold by auction in 1881.

SHORT SLEEVES CAUSE RIOT.

Bishop Tries to Eject Girl from Cathedral—Populace Attacks Him.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, Sept. 2.—Mgr. Liviero, Bishop of Citta di Castello, on the Tiber, was administering confirmation yesterday in the cathedral there when he noticed a girl wearing a shirtwaist with sleeves which he considered far too short. He interrupted the ceremony and called on her to withdraw.

As his advice was not followed, and as the girl remained in the cathedral after service, the Bishop walked up to her and attempted to eject her. Several young men, including the son of an Italian Deputy, at once took the girl's part, and the Bishop retired to the sacristy.

In the evening a demonstration took place before the episcopal palace, and when Mgr. Liviero appeared at a window, intending to address the populace, he was pelted with tomatoes and other vegetables.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Mrs. Langtry, who is shortly going to the United States on a twenty weeks' vaudeville tour, starting at the Colonial in New York, has been telling interviewers that she "really doesn't want to go at all, but is dazzled by the greenbacks offered to her." She adds:

"In fact, they are paying me so much that I am afraid nothing will be left for the orchestra or cleaners."

CUBANS FOR BARRING FOREIGN CONTRACTS

Propose Measure to Prevent Future Complications Due to Claims Growing from Them.

TAFT MILD OVER MAZA CASE

Won't Be Harsh in Demanding Punishment of Gibson's Assailant—Legations Want Protection.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Sept. 2.—In an effort to prevent future diplomatic complications growing out of claims against Cuba, five prominent Congressmen introduced a bill in the House to-day forbidding further State, provincial, and municipal contracts to be given to foreigners.

The measure requires that contractors must be Cubans, but foreigners will be allowed to enter into sub-contracts, provided they sign, before a notary public, an undertaking giving up for the future all rights claimed against the Government, except those they could claim under Cuban laws.

El Dia, the organ of the Conservative Party, devoted two pages to-day to the life of Maza, Secretary Gibson's assailant, showing that he had long been eccentric and was suspected of being insane.

The Cuban Veterans' Association, at a mass meeting to-night regarding the Gibson-Maza affair, voted to send to Mr. Taft the following cable:

"The Presusa Veterans, interpreting the unanimous sentiment of the Cuban people in National assembly, indignantly protest against the grievous assault to which the esteemed representative of the noble American Nation was subjected. You and your people may be assured that the loyal affection and sincere gratitude toward the nation which extended us its hand in the difficult hour of our independence will never grow lukewarm."

The association also appointed a committee of veterans to call on Mr. Gibson to-morrow and express regret for the Maza incident.

It was also resolved that if any Havana newspapers further attacked the Americans or their Government the veterans would consider their action a personal insult to them and take it up.

HAVANA, Sept. 2.—A meeting of the representatives here of foreign governments was held at the Uraguayan Legation to-day to consider the question of the protection of foreign diplomats. No action was taken. The meeting adjourned until to-morrow.

The hitherto hostile tone of the press against Hugh S. Gibson, the American Chargé d'Affaires, who was assaulted last week by Enrique Maza, a newspaper reporter, has greatly moderated, with the exception of that of El Siglo, which continues to pour insults upon Mr. Gibson and United States Minister Beaupre.

The Reconcentrado, one of the worst offenders in this respect, did not publish to-day. Its failure to appear is believed to have been due to action by the Cuban Government, but the nature of this action has not been revealed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—On his arrival here on Wednesday from Beverly, President Taft will have before him the correspondence relative to the assault on Hugh S. Gibson, American Chargé d'Affaires at Havana, and it is expected that he will then reply to President Gomez's letter of appeal.

This letter was given to newspaper representatives in Havana and the official copy was telegraphed from Washington to Beverly to-day. It is known here that President Taft is disposed to deal with the matter in a high-minded manner, and that the notion that he will make any severe demand on the Cuban Government is furthest from his mind.

BARONESS KILLED AT A HUNT.

Bullet Directed at a Boar is Deflected by a Tree and Strikes Her.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The death occurred last night, as the result of a hunting accident earlier in the day, of Baroness Frieda von Eckhardstein, who was prominent in German society.

The Baroness, who was 42 years old, was a member of a wild boar hunting party. She was standing at one of the coverts when a shot from the rifle of Count von Finckenstein intended for a boar glanced off from an adjacent tree and struck her.

Her death ensued at a hospital in Berlin after an operation.

KAISER STRENUOUS AS EVER.

Starts for Switzerland After Review and Other Activities.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Emperor William left Berlin this evening for Switzerland after a busy and fatiguing day, which, however, made no impression on his strength. After reviewing the Autumn parade in the morning, his Majesty wound up the day by attending a troop concert in the Lustgarten, visiting an open-air theatre, and later going to a banquet.

The review by the Emperor in the morning was of the most powerful army ever gathered together in Berlin in time of peace. It comprised over 60,000 men, and was composed of the artillery, cavalry, infantry, engineers, and auxiliary troops of the Guards and of the Third Army Corps.

The Army Flying Corps took part in the parade for the first time since its formation. Eight aeroplanes and two dirigible balloons under the guidance of officer-airmen flew at the head of the marching columns as they passed the Emperor.

His Majesty stood beneath the solitary poplar in the centre of the great Tempelhof parade ground and returned the salute of the troops as they went by. Near him were John G. A. Leishman, the American Ambassador, and Capt. Shartle, the American Military Attaché.

In the stands were hundreds of American visitors, while large groups of veterans of the Austro-German and Franco-German wars were present.

RESCUED IN SPITZBERGEN.

Dr. W. S. Bruce and Companion Saved by Steamer After Perilous Trip.

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 2.—Dr. William Speirs Bruce, the well-known Scotch explorer, and a companion, who had been exploring Spitzbergen, have been rescued by a steamer at Advent Bay, which they reached after a long and perilous trip.

The news of their rescue was received here to-day.

FINDS EUROPE AHEAD IN VICE SUPPRESSION

Rabbi Berkowitz Back from Tour Abroad for Philadelphia Mayoral Commission.

GERMAN CITIES IN THE LEAD

Protection Graft Eliminated by Organization of a Separate "Morals Police," He Says.

Among the passengers arriving yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland was Rabbi Henry Berkowitz, who has been abroad for two months in France, Germany, Norway, and England as a member of the Vice Commission appointed by the Mayor of Philadelphia to investigate conditions in that city. He said that Alexander W. Coote, head of the international movement in London to deal with the social evil, declared that the large cities in the United States were ahead of Europe in organizing their individual commissions to deal with the question to fit the local conditions.

"Personally," said the rabbi, "I think that the foreign cities, like Berlin, Hamburg, Stockholm, Copenhagen, and Christiania, are ahead of our cities, because they have eliminated the system of police graft for the protection of vice by organizing a separate body of well-equipped men and women, called 'morals police,' to see that the laws are carried out."

In his interview with a TIMES reporter on the Cleveland Rabbi Berkowitz went on to say that his party consisted of his wife, his brother Maurice, and sister-in-law, and that the tour, in spite of the wet weather and lack of sunshine, was very enjoyable.

"The official letters of introduction furnished me by Mayor Blankenburg before I left Philadelphia," said he, "gave me access to reliable sources of information and brought me into contact with leading officials and authorities in the cities I visited and unlocked doors usually kept closed to the ordinary American tourist.

"In addition the kind offices of our Ambassadors and Consuls enabled me to become acquainted with the conditions of the social evil in Norway, and Sweden, where I obtained interviews with the 'morals police' and obtained copies of important documents in reference to the methods in these two countries of dealing with vice.

"Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, the United States Minister to Denmark, extended his personal aid in Copenhagen in obtaining an insight into the workings of the Danish law.

"When I arrived in London I went to see the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House, where, through Alexander W. Coote, the moving spirit in the international association, I was received with every consideration and received valuable data as to what steps had been taken to improve the conditions in London in the last ten years.

"At Edinburgh, during the absence of the Lord Provost, the chief of the Public Health Department explained to me the situation in Scotland, which was very interesting and will be embodied with all the other data I have collected in my report to the commission.

"The most interesting city I visited on my tour was Berlin, which is conceded at present to be the most important centre of activities in this field. With Paris it sets the example by which the other European cities are largely influenced in this difficult matter.

"On presentation of my letter of introduction to Burgomeister Reicke he entered into the subject with me, and after an interview lasting three hours he instructed the Chief of the 'morals police' to extend to me every privilege and full data in his possession. Through this means I was put in touch with the entire system in the capital of the German Empire for remedying existing evils. I inspected the asylum for the homeless, which has accommodations for 8,000 persons, with a hospital attached for certain diseases.

"The man who is perhaps the most eminent living authority on social diseases, Dr. A. Blasehko, gave me valuable literature showing the scope and extent of the great educational movement in Germany, of which he is the organizer and moving spirit. Branches exist throughout the country, and an energetic propaganda is being conducted for the eradication of such diseases.

"The free City of Hamburg has methods quite distinct from those employed in Berlin in dealing with the vice problem. Through the help of the United States Consulate, I gained admittance into the city department having this subject in charge. The officials outlined the history of the campaign and the methods employed in the Hamburg system, and also gave me plans and copies of the regulations now in force and the results obtained."

FOSBREY BREAKS JAIL WITH KEEPERS NEAR

Tombs Prisoner, Held for Murder, Climbs Through Ventilator and Scales Outer Wall.

SECOND ATTEMPT IN A WEEK

Saws Smuggled to Him by Woman Then Discovered in His Cell—Accused of Two Brutal Murders.

Reynolds Fosbrey, who was held in the Tombs on a charge of murder, escaped early yesterday morning. He was in an isolated cell, with a trusty nearby, and a night warden and eight keepers in the building. He obtained his freedom with the aid of a stout oak beam which he picked up on his way to the outer wall of the prison.

Fosbrey's cell was on the ground floor in a separate one-story wing directly accessible from the main office of the prison. Fosbrey had been placed there by order of Warden Fallon immediately after the discovery of his attempt to escape from one of the upper tier cells on last Wednesday morning by the use of steel saws and muriatic acid smuggled to the prisoner by Margaret Ryan of Keap Street, Brooklyn.

During the storm early yesterday morning one of the keepers noticed a wooden beam leaning against the Centre Street wall of the prison. It was a substantial beam, so placed that it immediately suggested the scaling of the prison wall. The keeper gave the alarm, and after a general search led by Night Warden Jones it was discovered that Fosbrey's cell was unoccupied.

The trusty, named Hays, was resting unperturbed on a stool in a small anteroom adjoining the cell. When asked what he knew about the escape of Fosbrey he said he had not heard of any escape, and that he must have fallen asleep. The Warden then opened Fosbrey's cell. A spring mattress and a cot with blankets and covers were leaning against one wall of the cell immediately below the ventilator, which is about three feet by one foot in dimensions. The ventilator is about eight feet from the floor. Escape in this direction was not considered possible because the ventilator opened into a utility court, which is a barred prison in itself.

The prisoner tied a blanket to an iron bar and lowered himself into the court, which leads to the large turret on the northeast wing of the Tombs. In this turret is a carpenter shop. There Fosbrey obtained the oak beam. With it he opened a window on a narrow court which separates the prisoners from Centre Street. There are four one-inch steel bars in this window. With the beam as a lever Fosbrey bent one of the bars, making a sixteen-inch aperture, and he was soon in the court. Only the outer wall remained to be scaled.

On the Franklin Street side the wall is twenty-four feet high, but on Centre Street a part of the masonry is only ten feet high, with ten or twelve feet of iron bars above. The prisoner had only to rest the beam against the stone wall to get within reach of the bars. He scaled the bars easily and dropped to the sidewalk.

When Warden Fallon was notified of Fosbrey's escape he demanded an explanation from Night Warden Jones, who said that Night Keeper Houlihan had been on duty during the night in that section of the Tombs in which the isolated cell was located. Jones stated that twice during the night he had found Houlihan asleep, the first time at 11:30 o'clock in the evening, and the second time at 1:30 o'clock in the morning. Warden Fallon immediately suspended Houlihan.

Houlihan figured in the escape of George Witson on July 7 last. Witson, who was held in the Tombs on the charge of burglary, escaped by first secreting himself in the coal bin in the prison and then climbing through the coal hole. Witson encountered Houlihan in the prison yard and struck him senseless with a steel bar. Following the escape two keepers were discharged.

It was rumored at the Criminal Court Building yesterday that a general shakeup would take place in the near future. District Attorney Whitman is expected to return to-day, and it is said he will begin an investigation.

Fosbrey was facing two murder charges and was implicated in at least one other. On July 29 Morris Schwartzkopf, a jeweler at 8 Delancey Street, was shot in his store. Only an hour later Maxwell Katz, a clerk in a cigar store at 30 Cooper Street, was shot. He held his assailant, who was identified as Fosbrey, and later the prisoner was identified by Schwartzkopf as his assailant. Fosbrey was indicted on Thursday last for the murder of Walter Meseritz, a haberdasher of 881 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, who was shot by four men in his store last March.

There have been only four escapes from the Tombs, and two of these have taken place during the régime of Warden Fallon. John Hall, accused of felonious assault, tried to escape while crossing the Bridge of Sighs on July 27 last. He climbed through an open window and descended on a painter's ladder which was suspended under the bridge. A policeman shot him in the leg before he had proceeded far on Franklin Street, however, and Hall was returned to his cell and sent to Sing Sing.

On Sept. 1, 1872, William J. Sharkey, an east side gangster, under sentence of death for murder, walked out the front door of the prison in the guise of a woman, the attire having been furnished by a frequent visitor named Maggie Jordan, who professed to be the prisoner's fiancée.

Detectives are watching the former home of Margaret Ryan, who had planned to escape to Canada with Fosbrey. She is now at the Catholic Protectory for Girls, but the police think Fosbrey may look for her at the place where she formerly lived.

Warden Fallon said a trusty had been assigned to Fosbrey's cell to give an alarm in case the prisoner attempted suicide.

Fosbrey is about 25 years old and wore dark clothes at the time of his escape. He has dark hair. His occupation was that of plumber.

DOG BITES PARK MOUNTS.

Attacks Horses Ridden by J. B. Rovira and C. B. Hadley—Finally Shot.

The east bridle path of Central Park was terrorized yesterday morning by the rambling presence of a large, powerful white bulldog who scattered the pedestrians and frightened the horses passing that way for more than a half-hour. Joel B. Rovira and Charles B. Hadley, who were on spirited mounts, had an unpleasant few minutes with the animal.

The horses shied and pranced as the dog snapped at their forelegs, and no waving or lashing with crops had the slightest effect. Before help came both horses were frantically nervous and bleeding painfully from many small wounds. The help that came was in the person of Patrolman Dowling, who tried his club, found it useless, and then dropped the dog with one shot from his gun. Neither of the riders was hurt, and they took the horses to a veterinary.

The dog, according to the police, was one of the many pets turned loose with the vacatiin departure of New Yorkers. The Park has been overrun with deserted dogs and cats this Summer, and birds and squirrels have been killed in great numbers.

Trenton's Mayor to Sue Witte.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 2.—Dr. E. B. Witte, a leading physician of this city, having charged in a letter published in The Trenton Sunday Advertiser yesterday that Mayor F. W. Donnelly had been insincere and untruthful in his public dealings, the Mayor said to-day that he would sue both the paper and the doctor for libel. He will seek $25,000 from each defendant. He has retained counsel.

HITS PIER PILING IN FALL.

Fellow-Angler Pulls Charles Simons Unconscious from Bay.

Charles Simons, Treasurer of the National Web Company, 396 Broadway, was fishing off the end of a pier at Atlantic Highlands yesterday afternoon when he lost his balance and fell overboard. Simons was the only person at the end of the pier at the time. His fall, however, was seen by a number of people who had lines out at a spot about 100 feet distant.

Immediately there was a rush to where Simons had been sitting. He was known to be a strong swimmer, and his friends among the crowd expected to see him striking out vigorously for the landing. Instead of this, however, when they reached the end of the pier he was out of sight. Herman Froelich of 3,915 Broadway, a New York real estate dealer, threw off his coat and shoes and dived as soon as Simons rose to the surface.

Impeded though he was by his clothing, Froelich managed to reach Simons before he sank again. Taking hold of his coat, Froelich fought desperately to draw the drowning man after him to a ladder which runs from the pier to the water's edge. Simons, who was unconscious, was easy to handle, but the weight of the soaked clothing of the swimmer and the man he was rescuing made it difficult to do more than keep above the water. Gradually Froelich made progress in the direction of the ladder. He was nearly exhausted when he reached the side of the pier, where several stood ready on the ladder to lift him out of the water with the unconscious man.

When Simons was taken upon the pier it was found that in falling his head had struck one of the piling timbers of the pier, stunning him and rendering him unable to swim. After a few minutes' work over him, Simons was revived and taken back to his Summer cottage. Froelich was all right after a few minutes' rest.

RESCUED TWO FROM SOUND.

Patrolman Off Duty Sees Men as Wind Upsets Their Boat.

John O'Neil, 20, and Frank Botelle, 23, who occupy a tent in the St. Bartholomew Camp in Tent City, Pelham Bay, almost lost their lives yesterday while trying to sail an eighteen-foot catboat in the face of a high northeasterly wind which swept around Belden Point from Long Island Sound. Their boat was capsized about half a mile off the Point, and both were exhausted when rescued by Patrolman John Loughman of the City Island Station and Capt. Frederick Rose of the lumber sloop Thomas H. Lawrence.

The two amateur sailors were making their way, in the face of the wind, between Stepping Stone Light and Belden Point, when a gust of wind overturned the boat. They were thrown into the water, and clung to the bottom of the overturned boat, shouting for help.

The upset was seen by Loughman, who was off duty and fishing off the pier at Belden Point. The policeman called Capt. Rose, whose sloop was tied up to the pier, and the two got a motor boat and went to the rescue. The men were brought ashore at City Island.

THREE-CENT LINE HALTED BY RIVALS

Throngs Wait in Vain for New Car Service Over the Manhattan Bridge.

COURT ORDER STOPS POWER

Argument on Application for Injunction to be Heard Before Justice Newburger To-day.

The Manhattan Bridge Three-Cent Fare Line did not run its cars on the Manhattan Bridge yesterday as expected, because a Supreme Court order obtained by its rivals, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and associate operating roads in Brooklyn and Manhattan, prevented the Edison Company from supplying power for operating its service.

On the application of counsel for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, Justice Crane signed an order at his home on Sunday evening against the Edison Company. The order was made supplemental to one issued by Justice Aspinall on Saturday against the same company, directing it to show cause before Justice Kelby this morning why it should not be enjoined from supplying power to the Three-Cent Line.

There was nothing in the nature of an injunction in Justice Aspinall's order, and the Three-Cent Line began operating its cars on Sunday, but no passengers were carried. Cars were run all the afternoon to train the motormen in their work. This service was suspended until yesterday, when the company had arranged to begin carrying passengers.

Several crews of motormen and conductors were at the company's Brooklyn office, Jay and High Streets, near the plaza, all day yesterday, ready to man the cars. The noon hour was the time selected by the Three-Cent Line to start the first car for passengers. But when the Edison Company was ready to turn on the power its officials were served with the court order staying operations.

Crowds of people were waiting for several hours at the Brooklyn and Manhattan terminals of the bridge to board the cars. They were unaware that the cars would not run until it was reported about that a court order had stopped the service. It was estimated that at noon there were 500 people at the Brooklyn terminal and 1,000 at the Manhattan end of the bridge. They were compelled to go away disappointed. To maintain order, reserves from the Fulton Street Station were on duty in Brooklyn to aid policemen from the Bridge Squad.

Officials of the Three-Cent Line were greatly disappointed at the unexpected move by their rivals. Aware that an attempt was made to get an injunction from Justice Crane on Saturday afternoon after Justice Aspinall had signed the first order, they were surprised to find that the other roads had finally succeeded in obtaining a restraining order. Some of them were of the opinion that they had a good cause for a damage suit against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and the operating companies associated with it in this latest move to block the three-cent service.

Almet Reed Latson, chief counsel for the Three-Cent Fare Line, was in consultation with the officials of the line yesterday, and the defense of the road to be presented in court to-day was mapped out. He said the same argument was offered on the application for both orders signed by Justice Aspinall and Justice Crane. The rivals contended that the Edison Company was not allowed by its charter to supply power outside of the Borough of Brooklyn, and that in doing so it was entering into a partnership with the Three-Cent Line.

Argument on another application for an injunction against the Three-Cent Line will also be heard before Justice Newburger in Manhattan this morning.

STRIKERS TEAR UP RAILS.

More West Virginia Militia Called Out to Protect Coal Mines.

CHARLESTON, West Va., Sept. 2.—Striking miners to-day tore up the railroad tracks above Elkdale on Cabin Creek in an effort to stop the shipment of coal from the mines that are operating at the upper end of the creek. A company of militia was sent to the scene, and after driving the strikers off the soldiers began repairing the tracks.

While this work was going on the strikers attacked the roadbed several miles away and another company was sent after them. Late to-day four companies of the State militia were ordered to the strike district. These are in addition to five companies ordered out Saturday.

Several revolvers and rifles were captured to-day and several arrests for carrying concealed weapons were made. It is feared that martial law will be proclaimed before another twenty-four hours.

FOUR DEAD IN TRAIN WRECK.

Cars Hurled Into Flood-Swollen River When Bridge Is Washed Away.

CAMP DOUGLAS, Wis., Sept. 2.—Four persons were killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad, which plunged into the Lemonweir River near Camp Douglas to-day, owing to the washing away of a bridge. Twenty-six persons were injured, six seriously.

Every car, including the sleepers with passengers still in their berths, was hurled into the stream, whose waters, augmented by the cloudburst of last night, had made it a torrent. Panic-stricken occupants of the sleeping cars, clad only in night clothes, struggled through broken windows to escape. The smoking car was carried downstream, but all its occupants escaped.

The dead are Engineer Ralph Thompson, Fireman Abramson, a mail clerk whose name is unknown, and the baggageman, named Lee.

The train had passed safely over the bridge a short time before, but was flagged at Tunnel, because a washout further on had made the track impassable, and was ordered back to Camp Douglas, so that the passengers might breakfast.

Meanwhile the Lemonweir, flooded by a cloudburst several miles up the valley, had torn away the bridge, and, unwarned, the engineer could not stop his train in time to save it from plunging into the river.

Relief trains bearing doctors and nurses were sent out from several nearby towns.

RECTOR WON'T WED GIRL OF OTHER SECT

Declines to Marry Couple Because She Is Not of the Episcopal Faith.

ARCHDEACON IS SURPRISED

Nothing in Church Law to Force Dr. Upham to Refuse to Act, Says Dr. Nelson.

The marriage of Alma De Levante, the daughter of Maurice De Levante, former business manager of The Brooklyn Citizen, and now of the firm of Levante, Beaver & Co., brokers, living at 721 Avenue G, Brooklyn, to Irving Gillies of the firm of Loftus, Dugan & Gillies, engineers and contractors of New Bedford, Mass., was temporarily delayed yesterday when the Rev. Dr. Upham, acting rector of the Little Church Around the Corner, refused to marry the couple on the ground that Miss De Levante had not been baptised in the Episcopal Church. The Rev. Dr. Andrew Fleming of the Church of the Nativity, Flatbush, performed the ceremony in the ladies' parlor of the Hotel Breslin later in the day.

The courtship began when Mr. Gillies customarily carried Miss Levante's books home from school some twelve years ago. Both families had lived in the same neighborhood during the greater part of the lifetime of the couple. When Mr. Gillies, who is 27 years old, was taken into his firm, his first act was to pay a visit to Mr. De Levante, whose consent to the marriage was readily given.

The bridal party was surprised when Dr. Upham asked whether the couple had been individually baptized in the Episcopal faith. Mr. Gillies had; Miss Levante had not. Learning this, Dr. Upham, who is acting rector while the Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton is on his vacation, refused to perform the ceremony unless Miss Alma first went through the baptismal rite.

Dr. Fleming, in the choir of whose church Miss De Levante has sung for several years, was notified, and he hastened to the Breslin to perform the ceremony.

The Rt. Rev. George F. Nelson, Archdeacon of the Episcopal Diocese, when seen at the Diocesan House, 416 Lafayette Street, last evening by a TIMES reporter, expressed great surprise at the refusal of Dr. Upham to perform the ceremony for the reason that the bride was not baptized in the Episcopalian faith. He first procured a copy of the Church canons which clearly stated that when it was shown that a person was of sound mind, of age, had never been divorced, and was free from "moral contamination," it was the privilege of an Episcopalian clergyman to perform the marriage, regardless of religious faith, providing the civil obligations or laws had been complied with.

"I am exceedingly surprised," said he, "that Dr. Upham should have used any such excuse or reason for refusing to marry these people. It is the first instance of which I have ever heard for a minister of our faith to raise this point. The tenets and canons of the Episcopal Church clearly state that religious differences shall not affect a marriage. I believe that Dr. Upham is a new assistant to Dr. Houghton, and it is possible that he may not be fully versed in the knowledge of the Church laws governing marriages. Again, it is possible that he merely used it as an excuse; for any minister has, of course, a right to refuse to perform a marriage."

LAWYER REBUKED IN COURT.

Counsel for Interborough Attempts to Alter Charge Against Prisoner.

Magistrate Herbert, presiding in the Morrisania Court, yesterday severely rebuked Lawyer John Sherman Moulton, counsel for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, when the latter attempted to substitute a charge of disorderly conduct for one of criminal assault against Joseph Frank, accused of attacking Special Policeman Flynn in the Subway station. The prisoner, who is 21 years old and lives at 121 West 116th Street, had fallen asleep in the station, and when Flynn shook him, it is charged, Frank assaulted the policeman. At the station a charge of assault was made against him.

When the case was called yesterday Mr. Moulton endeavored to change the complaint against the prisoner to one of disorderly conduct. Magistrate Herbert warned him not to interfere with the due process of the law. Mr. Moulton apologized profusely, saying that he had simply intended to aid in the speedy disposal of the case. The Magistrate replied that the court was amply able to take care of that matter, and ordered that the charge be changed to the original one of assault. Upon the prisoner's request that he be allowed more time for obtaining witnesses, he was held in $500 bail for a hearing this morning.

FIVE THROWN FROM AUTO.

All Escape Serious Injury in Collision of Taxicab and Touring Car.

A touring car driven by its owner, James Winkler of Woodhaven, L. I., and carrying five passengers, collided with a taxicab at Glenmore Avenue and Hinsdale Street, Brooklyn, early yesterday and was overturned. The occupants of the cars were thrown out, but escaped without serious injury to any one. Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson of 1,116 Hoffman Boulevard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mount of 425 McCormack Avenue, and James McQueen of 251 Grand Avenue were in the car.

Both the touring car and the taxicab, driven by Frank Titus, were completely wrecked. After being attended to by a physician the victims were taken to their homes in street cars.

LABOR DAY MARCHERS DEFY COLD AND WET

Parade of 20,000 Moves Rapidly to Keep Warm, Police Aiding Them.

WOMEN IN LIGHT DRESSES

Striking Drivers and Furriers Get Applause—No I. W. W. Men Allowed In Line.

Under lowering September skies the hosts of organized labor yesterday valiantly challenged the weather man in their annual Labor Day parade. Despite the chill winds, fully 20,000 were in line, about 5,000 of the marchers being women. With bands playing, flags flying, and gayly decorated floats lending a touch of color to the spectacle, the parade swept through Fifth Avenue to Washington Square, where the various divisions broke ranks and the paraders dispersed.

It had been expected that the Industrial Workers of the World, the Socialist labor organization which had been denied a place in the parade by the committee of the Central Labor Union, would attempt to hold a rival demonstration, and with a view to preventing any such attempt 589 patrolmen were assigned by Commissioner Waldo to guard the line of march. The Industrial Workers, however, were not in evidence, and the parade was uninterrupted from start to finish.

The Grand Marshal, Thomas J. Curtis, and his aids experienced considerable difficulty in forming the different divisions, and this occasioned a delay of more than half an hour in getting the parade started. As a result the crowds of spectators who lined the sidewalks on either side of Fifth Avenue had thinned perceptibly before the vanguard of the labor army, headed by a platoon of mounted police, was in motion. It spoke well for the enthusiasm and earnestness of the marchers, however, that not a single parader was daunted by the cold, cutting blasts which caused the less hardy persons on the sidewalks to complain.

The Unions in Line.

This was the order of the marchers:

FIRST DIVISION.

John Sullivan, Marshal; Machinists' District Council No. 15; Tunnel and Subway Constructors; Eccentric Firemen's Union No. 55; Theatrical Electric Calcium Light Operators.

SECOND DIVISION.

Thomas J. Walsh, Marshal; United Safety and Portable Engineers No. 184; International Brotherhood of Steam Shovelers and Dredgemen; Pavers and Rammermen; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Union of New York; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 1; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 9.

THIRD DIVISION.

Isadore Epstein, Marshal; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 10; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 20; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 64; Women's Trade Union League; St. Gregory's Hospital Ambulance.

FOURTH DIVISION.

John J. Brady, Marshal; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 35; Cloak and Skirt Makers' Local No. 3; Italian and Russian-Polish Branch of the Cloak and Skirt Makers.

FIFTH DIVISION.

William Cronin, Marshal; Coal Teamsters' Helpers No. 553; Railway Express Drivers and Helpers No. 645; United States Mail Drivers and Helpers No. 537; Furniture Van Teamsters and Helpers No. 643; Commission Drivers and Helpers No. 449; Building Material Drivers and Helpers No. 654; Excavating Teamsters and Helpers No. 506; Chauffeurs and Cab Drivers No. 207.

SIXTH DIVISION.

Thomas J. Flanagan, Marshal; Newspaper and Mail Deliverers' Union; Metal Polishers' Union No. 34; Journeymen Tailors No. 390; Badge, Banner, and Novelty Workers; Pearl Button Makers; United Hatters' wagon.

SEVENTH DIVISION.

Elias Wolf, Marshal; Ship Riggers No. 763; Longshoremen Local No. 791; Steamship Coal Handlers No. 379; Scow Trimmers No. 311.

EIGHTH DIVISION.

Samuel Martin, Marshal; Furriers of New York City.

Cold for Women Marchers.

At the head of the labor army rode Grand Marshal Curtis and his aids, Matthew A. McConville and Michael T. Neyland, while up and down the sides of the ranks of marchers cantered former School Commissioner James P. Holland, Assistant Grand Marshal, and his aids, John C. O'Brien and John C. Hilsdorf, who kept the eight divisions of the parade in close formation and prevented gaps from opening between the different sections.

President Edward L. Hannah and ex-President James Hatch of the Central Federated Union rode in an open carriage directly behind the Grand Marshal.

Most of the various labor unions which participated in the parade were distinguished by individual uniforms. The machinists wore blue denim, peaked caps with overalls and jumpers of the same material. The Tunnel and Subway Constructors wore working uniforms of brown canvas, and the Firemen's Union presented a soldierly appearance in their blue flannel shirts and black trousers.

A picturesque feature of the parade was the division composed of the Women's Trade Union League and the unions affiliated with that organization. The members of the league, ranging from girls in their teens to middle-aged women, marched in white dresses, defying the cold wind, and wore sashes of orange and blue, the official colors of the league. They were loudly cheered throughout the line of march. Fourteen comely young women, dressed in flowing classic robes which fluttered in the breeze, rode upon a large float symbolizing woman's influence in art and industry. The float was decorated with white and gold and was filled to overflowing with goldenrod. Each of the girls carried shields upon which were inscribed appropriate mottoes.

Strikers Applauded.

The greatest ovations, however, were given to the Sand and Excavation Teamsters' Union and the furriers' organization, both of which are on strike. The teamsters displayed a large number of banners with mottoes: "Shorter Hours and a Living Wage," "We Strike for Justice," "No Sunday Work Without Pay," and similar sentiments. The furriers comprised the last division of the parade and made a splendid showing. This union was the largest numerically in the entire line of march, and about a third of the paraders in the division were women. Like the teamsters, many of the striking furriers carried signs. The most frequently seen of these read: "Recognition of the Union Means Protection for the Workman." Others demanded "A Full Season and an Eight-Hour Day" or "A Union Scale and No Home Work." Cheers greeted the furriers at every point in the march.

As the strikers passed the establishment of Jaeckel & Co. at Thirty-second Street and Fifth Avenue, one of the firms affected by the strike, the band which headed their division blared forth the stirring notes of the "Marseillaise," and a number of the marchers took up the air and sang it defiantly until stopped by one of the Marshals of the parade.

The police arrangements surpassed those of former years, especially so far as the handling of traffic at cross streets was concerned. Every opportunity was afforded the marchers to maintain an uninterrupted line, and whenever the crossings were opened to traffic the entire body came to a halt. These delays were as brief as possible, and the result was that the progress of the parade was rapid. The members of the Committee of Arrangements were loud in their praise of the police when the long march ended at Washington Square. It was only because of the fact that the paraders had been able to march briskly, they said, that many of the more thinly clad participants were able to withstand the exposure to the cold wind.

ENGINEERS OF TESTS PLAN PUBLIC SAFETY

Congress Will Open To-day with 500 Famous Scientists from Abroad.

AIM IS PROTECTION OF LIFE

Dr. Howe Calls It the "Industrial Parliament of Man"—To-day's Addresses.

Twelve hundred delegates, representing all of the more prominent engineering societies of the world, and including more than 300 official delegates of foreign Governments, will assemble at 9 o'clock this morning in the Engineering Societies' Building at 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, for the sixth congress of the International Association for Testing Materials. From 8 o'clock yesterday morning until late last night the Registration Department of the congress was busy enrolling the names of the delegates and certifying their credentials. More than 300 European and Asiatic delegates recorded their names and presented certificates as delegates, and it is expected that they will number 500 before the first general assembly of the congress is called to order.

Dr. Henry M. Howe, President of the International Association, will preside, and will deliver the address of welcome. In outlining the purpose of the congress to a TIMES reporter yesterday, Dr. Howe said:

"The function of the testing engineer is to stand between the public and the manufacturers who would supply that public, to test the fitness of those supplies, to measure accurately their degree of fitness, and to reject unsparingly the unfit. He is a guardian of those who travel by land or sea, and of those who live or work in buildings of important size. He is the protector of the material interests of the public, because in the last analysis all structures and all materials of which they are made are for the use and benefit of the public, individually and collectively, and are paid for directly or indirectly by that public.

"It is to make this work of the testing engineer more effective, to guard the lives and the interests of the public the better that this association exists. It is an open court in which the public sits in judgment on the various methods of testing. However distant may be the political 'Parliament of Man,' which is coming, yet 'for a' that,' the industrial parliament of man is already here. The buyer of each country may well say: 'My country is the world, my countrymen are all mankind,' for wherever his abode he selects the fittest goods, quality and cost considered, without regard to their origin. To-day's market place is the world, and our society is an essential part of that pentecostal market place, in which we enable all races to speak the common language of the methods of testing, that is, of appraising the market places of competing goods."

The main hall of the Engineering Societies' Building, where the delegates presented their credentials, was a busy place from early yesterday morning until late last night. The lobby of the ground floor was decorated with English, German, Spanish, Swedish, Danish, Austrian, Russian, French, and American flags. Even the new-born banner of the Chinese Republic was in evidence. Of the 300 foreign delegates to the congress who registered yesterday the more important were Privy Councilor A. Martens, official representative of the German Government; Prof. Hjorth, delegate of the Swedish Government; Leslie Robertson, Secretary of the British Standards Imperial Commission; Alexander Foss and Paul Larsen, representatives of Denmark; Prof. Alexander Mastukoff, delegate of the Czar; Col. Rudesindo Montoto, Commander of the Corps of Engineers of Spain, and August Dyckerhoff of the Prussian Railroad Commission.

Many of the Government representatives of foreign lands are men of title. Russia sends a Prince in Andrew Gargarin of St. Petersburg, while she is also represented by Prince P. V. Lieven. Great Britain sends among her representatives Sir Hugh Bell and Sir Robert Hadfiek.

Last night a reception was tendered to the foreign delegates and the ladies who have accompanied them to this country. At the general session of the congress to-day addresses of welcome will be delivered by Gen. William H. Bixby, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., and by Gov. John A. Dix of this State. Controller Prendergast will welcome the delegates to this city in behalf of the Municipal Government.

THE IRISH FIGHT TOO WELL

And the Winners of the Battle the Judges Cannot Tell.

Arrah, Paddy dear, an' had ye seen the Irish Volunteers defendin' Rosedale waterworks like valiant grenadiers? Sure, you'd have thought the dear ol' land would surely soon be free; but the la'ads were fightin' 'mongst themselves for practice, d' ye see? It happened yester afternoon before the sun had set; the whole brigade was divvied up in different camps, you bet. An' one side represented the hated British foe, while the other fought for Ireland and her liberties, ye know.

The Sassenachs, they charged an' charged against ol' Ireland's sons an' naught was heard on any side but bangin' of the guns, when suddenly the lads who played the part of Saxon foes forgot that they were English and an awful scrap arose. For the wearers of the green refused to make retreat an' the la'ads who took the other side went at them hands and feet.

So when the smoke of battle at last had rolled away an' the umpires gave decision on the outcome of the fray, sure not a man could tell who won, believe me, that is true, for while one side had taken the fort, the other held it, too.

An' so the wily judges said the battle was a draw an' every one declared the fight the best they ever saw.

The verdict of the umpires was "the Irish can't be beat," which proves that in their judgment they surely were discreet. An when on history's pages some future sage will write the story of that conflict, 'twill be said that they were right, for though an Irishman may lick a Dutchman or a Greek, you'll never find an Irishman was licked, where'er you seek.

'Tis sad, alack! to close this tale in bitter prose, 'tis true, but time is waxing short and hence we bid the muse adieu.

The annual encampment of the First Brigade of the Irish Volunteers ended yesterday with a sham battle fought in Rosedale, L. I. Among the interested spectators were John Devoy, the famous Fenian leader of 1867, who directed the manoeuvrs. Before the battle a military mass was held for the memory of the late Lieut. Col. Kilgar, at which the Rev. William T. McLoughlin of St. Augustine's Church, Union Hill, N. J., officiated. Borough President Connolly of Queens reviewed the brigade before it broke camp.

TWO SHOT AT CARDS.

One Dead, the Other Dying, Both Sitting Upright in Their Chairs.

Four revolver shots, followed by yells, drew Policeman Wey on the run, revolver in hand, to the Cafe Degli, 336 East 109th Street, early last night.

When he reached the cafe he found a dozen men jammed in the narrow doorway, each one trying to escape into the street. Wey waved them back with his revolver and blew his whistle for help. Policeman Matthews and Sergt. O'Connor came running up and the three policemen forced the group back into the cafe.

Inside they found two men seated at a table beside a window which opened into the hallway of the tenement house. Each man held some cards in his hands, exactly as though they had continued their game throughout the excitement. One glance, however, showed the policemen that one of the men was dead. Two bullets had struck him behind the right ear. The other man was sitting unconscious in his chair. The bullets had entered his left temple.

From the crowd the police learned that the dead man was Tony Zacaro, who lived over the cafe. He was known as a bad man, and recently had been released from Elmira. The unconscious man was Giuseppi Jacko, proprietor of the cafe. The crowd said they had been seated about playing cards and drinking when they heard the reports of four shots, which had been fired through the window from the hall. They ran and that was all they knew about it.

The police searched the house, but could find no trace of the assassin or assassins. They called Dr. Bishoff and he took Jacko to the Presbyterian Hospital. The surgeon said he was almost sure to die before morning.

RAIN HURTS BEACH TRAFFIC.

Thermometer Touched 61, but Three Years Ago It Registered Only 52.

Yesterday's clouded skies and biting winds proved a cruel disappointment to local pleasure resorts. Coney Island lacked its usual Labor Day crowds, and other neighboring beaches were affected in the same manner. The unpropitious weather was responsible for a loss of at least $100,000 to the Long Island Railroad and for $20,000 loss to the New York & Queens County Railway. The larger railroads also suffered.

At the Grand Central Station it was stated last night that the usual outgoing holiday crowds had been lacking throughout the morning and afternoon, and that the inclement weather of the last few days had augmented the number of returning vacationists far beyond the usual figures for Sept. 2.

At the Pennsylvania Station the same report was received. From the Passenger Department it was learned that the last three days had largely increased the figures of incoming passengers, and had decreased appreciably the number of outgoing passengers. The same conditions were reported at the Delaware & Lackawanna and Erie terminals.

Inquiry at the Weather Bureau last night elicited the information that the lowest temperature recorded during the day was 61 degrees. A year ago the thermometer registered only 64 degrees, and in 1910 only 63 degrees. The previous year's record—that of 1909—shows a temperature of 52 degrees. The average temperature for Sept. 2, according to the Weather Bureau, has been 62 degrees.

"The end of the hot weather has not yet arrived," asserted a railroad man last night, "but we are in all probability due for an unpleasant spell of weather between now and the middle of September. I have witnessed such seasons before, and they always result in a curtailment of the vacation period. Between the 10th and the 15th of this month we will be busy with late vacationists who are leaving town to spend the last days of Indian Summer in the Country."

SKAT PRIZES AWARDED.

W. Kaufman Wins First Place in Congress and $500.

The fifth skat congress of the Nordoestlicher Skat-Verband ended last night with a kommers at Ebling's Casino, 156th Street and St. Ann's Avenue. The following were announced to be the winners: W. Kaufman of Jersey City, first prize, $500, given by the Skat-Verband; S. Behrens of the Bronx, second, piano, given by The German Herold; C. Muehlman of Philadelphia, third, $250, given by The Staats-Zeitung.

A programme of singing, speech-making, and vaudeville acts took place at the kommers. Several of the songs were the compositions of members of the congress in praise of skat. The speakers were Willy Breitenbach, President of the kommers; A. Mildenburg, President of the Skat-Verband; Cyrus C. Miller, President of the Borough of the Bronx, and Senator Thomas J. Griffen.

Car Guard Held for Hitting Bluecoat.

Magistrate Freschi in the Tombs Court yesterday held Patrick Hefferan, a guard on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit elevated, in $500 bail for trial on a charge of assaulting Policeman Cavanaugh of the East Twenty-second Street Station. The assault took place at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge and, according to the complainant, Hefferan struck him after an argument as to the manner in which he boarded the car. Cavanaugh says that as he stepped on the platform of the car Hefferan reproached him for crowding women and struck him in the eye when he denied that he had pushed anybody.

MOTOR BOATS IDLE, PROTEST TALK HOT

Postponement of Harmsworth Cup Race Brings to Light Much Criticism.

CONTENTION OVER RELIANCES

Peter Pan's Owner Thinks His Boat Can Beat Winner of Saturday's Race.

The exceptionally bad weather conditions caused a postponement of the second race for the Harmsworth Cup yesterday, so it will take place to-day at 2 P. M., weather permitting.

Huntington Bay was seldom in as bad a mood as it was yesterday, and more seaworthy craft than the hydroplanes that are entered for the blue ribbon motor boat event of the world had to seek shelter from the wind and rough water. Alcyone, a large power yacht, went out on the course, carrying the committee, which wanted to observe closer the conditions. In making the turn at the first mark the boat poked her nose into a big wave, and Henry R. Sutphen, one of the officials, was nearly swept overboard.

On the whole, the postponement apparently did not please the foreigners. Their official representative, A. Jackson Stone, who lived in this country up to a few years ago, was heard to say:

"We can have a walkover to-day if we desire to go out and contest, and can protest on a dozen different grounds, but, on the contrary, our desire is to win, but not on a technicality.

"We want to show the efficiency of our boats in comparison with the American craft. Since last night we have heard and seen at least a dozen things, each of which, if true, would enable the British to protest. There is no need for that, however. The English boats are now ready to race, but we acquiesce in the desire of the American owners for a postponement. Our boats can live in rough as well as calm water, but, as the main object of these contests is speed, and not seaworthiness, we agree to a postponement.

"If I was personally present yesterday and saw the overhauling of Reliance III. I saw fins being attached to the boat. If I had my foot in the right shoe—that is, if I were the owner of one of the British boats—I would know what to do immediately. As I am not, I'll keep my eyes shut."

The air was surcharged with protests against the nomination of Reliance III. even at this late date, when objection is futile. It was said that this boat, which had been credited with a speed of four miles better than that of Reliance II., had not even been in the water to show such speed. That she had been equipped with a Van Vlerck motor when in the West, but upon her appearance here it developed that a Sterling engine had been installed, and that it had never been tried.

There was plenty of contention over the fact that the Blackton interests had two boats in the race, whereas the rules specifically state "That two or several boats owned entirely or partly by the same person or the same syndicate cannot be entered in the same race."

The rule as to the ownership of boats reads: "Every boat entered in a regatta must be owned 'bona fide' by a society or a syndicate recognized by a National authority, or by one or several persons in whose name the boat has been entered, and who must be members of a motor boat society or automobile club recognized by a National authority."

James Simpson, owner of Peter Pan V., which was one of the popular selections as a prospective defender before the make-up of the team was made known Saturday afternoon, declared that he was ready and willing to wager at the odds of 5 to 1 that his boat could beat any one of the Reliances over any sort of water the Reliance representatives wanted to race on.

H. W. Fauber, the inventor of the hydroplane, who was among those present at the time the event was called off, announced that he had prepared suits, papers in which would be served in two weeks, against the builders and owners of Reliance II., Reliance III., and Ankle Deep for infringement of patent rights. The damages will be placed at 10 per cent. of the selling price of each boat. It was stated by Mr. Fauber that Blackton had paid him royalty on the Vita last year on similar grounds.

GRAY-HAIRED WOMAN WINS.

Catherine Gross, 45 Years, Best In Two-Mile Swim at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 2.—Catherine Gross, 45 years old and gray haired, easily won the two-mile swimming event for women, held yesterday in the Mississippi River. Her time was 27:30, regarded as excellent.

Her nearest competitor, Miss Adelaide Steger, 18 years old, was 200 yards behind her. Miss Charlotte Lovey, 20, was third. Nine women started, seven finishing. With the exception of the winner, all were on the underside of 25.

Kelpie and Dart Win at Stamford.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 2.—The one-design fleet of the Stamford Yacht Club sailed its final race to-day in a brisk east wind and choppy sea. It was really two races in one, for Kelpie and Curlew were racing for the Tournament Cup, while the others were sailing only for the Series Cup. Kelpie beat the Curlew by 37 seconds, while the Dart won the race, beating all the other boats handily. The order of finish follows:

NEWPORT HORSE SHOW.

New Yorkers Among Blue Ribbon Winners In Ring.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 2.—Newport's sixteenth annual horse show was opened to-day before a large and fashionable assemblage, despite lowering clouds and the fact that rain fell before the gates were opened.

An international flavor was lent to the occasion by the presence of members of the Russian and German Embassies and of numerous other foreign notables.

The riding of Miss Eleonora Sears of Boston and of Mrs. Phillip Allan Clark of Newport was excellent. Blue ribbons were awarded, among others, to Lehmann Strauss of New York, W. A. McGibbons, Harrison, N. Y.; Edward B. McLean, Washington, D. C.; J. Sumner Draper, Milton, Mass., and Godfrey Preece of White Plains, N. Y.

CHAPPLE AND HASHA

To Race To-night at Brighton Beach Stadium Motordrome.

Arthur Chapple of New York and Eddie Hasha, the Texan Flier, will be the headliners to-night in the postponed motor cycle races at the Brighton Beach Stadium-Motordrome. The inclement weather of the past three days necessitated a triple postponement of the sport, and with the long lay-off the men are anxious to get back into harness.

Despite the necessary practice which both men should have to be on edge for to-night's race, each expressed himself as ready to lower the other's colors, and when they line-up for the race it will be with an avowed do or die spirit.

Chapple is without a peer in the sprint events up to five miles, but Hasha should prove a deserving opponent to-night. The regular programme of amateur races and other professional events will be carded with ten heats making up the complete programme.

SMALL FLEET ON BAY.

Misunderstanding as to Sailing Marks Causes Several Disqualifications.

In a rain squall from the northeast the racing flotilla of the Lower Bay sailed the forty-sixth annual regatta of the Atlantic Yacht Club yesterday. So miserable were the conditions that only a small fleet took part in the contest. Although a haze hung over the waters and rain fell throughout, the yachtsmen had an excellent breeze to send them over the courses, and as a result the racing was keen and interesting.

Being the annual regatta of the club, the boats were sent over outside courses. As the wind came, it was necessary to reverse the courses and have all of the marks left on the starboard instead of the port hand. Several of the skippers misunderstood the instructions given by the Regatta Committee, made up of Carlos de Zafra, Chairman, Alvah Nickerson, and J. Lewis Luckenbach, and left the outer marks on the wrong hand. Although they finished, the craft were disqualified by the committee.

Hendon Chubb's Spider won among the Q boats, and on both actual and corrected time. Claire led home the first division of the handicap class. The second division was taken by Blue Bill in the same manner.

Although the first to finish, M. & F. II. was disqualified for rounding Old Orchard in the wrong manner, and the division was won by Cyric. Merry Widow led home the X boats. The summary:

BAYSIDE Y. C. REGATTA.

Little Boats Sail in Stiff Southeasterly Breeze on Sound.

A thick drizzling rain fell over Little Neck Bay and threatened to develop into a heavy rainfall yesterday afternoon when the boats that were entered in the annual Labor Day regatta of the Bayside Yacht Club lined up for the start. The rain abated somewhat, and with a stiff southeasterly breeze blowing, the contesting yachts made the fastest time of the season over the triangular course. In the new Bayside bird class the six contesting yachts finished within three minutes of each other, affording the closest race of the season. Arthur W. Knapp's Loon proved to be the best on a heavy sea, and won from Arthur C. Andrew's Dodo by the margin of forty-four seconds.

William H. Johns's Bettie, established a record for the course in the one design class, flying over the triangular route in 1 hour 30 minutes and 10 seconds. The Victor had nothing to fear, as A. Nesbitt's Edna J. found the going too rough and did not finish. The summary:

BAYSIDE BIRD CLASS.

The Birds finished in different rotation in a skippers' race in the morning, in which no owner was allowed to pilot his own craft. Walter Dayton, at the helm of Charles G. Meyer's Plover, won rather handily from the Loon, which was piloted by Arthur C. Andrews. The latter's Dodo, manned by Mr. Meyer, finished third. The summary:

Istalena Wins Marshall Cup.

The victory of Istalena, George M. Pynchon's sixty-five-foot sloop, yesterday at the Fall regatta of the Larchmont Yacht Club finally broke the tie which existed between this craft and Cornelius Vanderbilt's Aurora and E. T. Hall's Winsome. The prize at issue was the Wilson Marshall Cup.

NEW YORK CREWS WIN ON POTOMAC

Metropolitan Oarsmen Show to Advantage in the Middle States Regatta.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 2.—New York oarsmen captured several events to-day in the twenty-third annual regatta of the Middle States Association on the Potomac River. Weather conditions for rowing could not be improved upon, and although no records were broken many of the events were fast and exciting.

F. Miller of the New York Athletic Club won the opening event of the day, junior single sculls, in an impressive manner. This victory was followed by the Metropolitan Rowing Club capturing the senior double sculls, one of the leading events of the regatta. Oarsmen from the Ravenswood, New Rochelle, and other New York clubs materially increased the list of prizes won by the metropolitan rowing representatives.

The best race of the day was the final event on the morning programme, the junior eight-oared race, in which were entered the junior crews from the Ariel Rowing Club of Baltimore and the Potomacs and Anolastans of Washington. The race narrowed to a contest between the Ariels and Potomacs, in which both crews were alternately leading. Within a hundred feet from the finish the Ariels increased their stroke and won by a foot and a half. The summaries:

STORM SWEEPS RANGE.

Ohio and Massachusetts Riflemen Win at Sea Girt.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Sept. 2.—A storm which swept the coast to-day forced the curtailment of a full day's programme of the inter-State shooting tournament to only two events. It was dark and rainy, windy, and cold on the range most of the day, but the two-men team match and the veteran organization team match were shot. The first was won by Capts. G. Emerson and H. E. Simon of Ohio, who were winners of the same event last year. This earned for them the unofficial reputation of being the best pair of shots in the country.

Each competitor fired ten shots at 600 yards and ten shots at 1,000 yards. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions they scored 190 out of a possible 200. The other teams in order were: Corp. Long and Sergt. Schofield of Massachusetts, 188; Sergts. Leuscher and Kneubel of New York, 186; Capt. Eddy, Ohio, and G. W. Chesley, Connecticut, 186; Lieut. Caldwell and Sergt. Clouser, District of Columbia, 186; Lieut. Munshower and Sergt. Gemmill, Maryland, 185; Capt. Geist and Sergt. Durchenwald, Iowa, 185; Lieut. Fincel and Sergt. C. M. King, Iowa, 185; Col. Upton and Sergt. Keough, Massachusetts, 185; H. J. Gussman, Connecticut, and W. E. Reynolds, New Jersey, 184.

The veteran organization team match, open to teams of six from any veteran National Guard organization of any State, the prize being a trophy, was won by the team representing the Old Guard of Massachusetts. It scored 218 out of a possible 300. Each team member fired ten shots at 200 yards. The other teams in order were: Company C, Fourth New Jersey Veteran Association, 217; Ten-Year Veteran Organization, Second Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, 189; Old Guard, New York, 178.

Canoe Association Races.

The Atlantic Division of the American Canoe Association was able to hold only two of the races of its Labor Day programme. On account of the high wind and rough water, it was rather dangerous to sail canoes at Canoe Beach on the Hudson yesterday, but the two events that took place resulted as follows:

The Lady Bug Trophy, (Open Sailing Canoes.)—Won by Douglas Cummins; Fred Smith, second; John Ahrens, third.

Decked Sailing Handicap.—Won by Leo Freide, (scratch;) W. E. Harrison, (5 minutes,) second.

The remainder of the programme will be run off next Sunday afternoon at the Inwood Canoe Club, and the race for the Elliott Trophy will be held at the Knickerbocker C. A. in the morning.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 2.—The Giants made a triumphant clean-up of the holiday double header with the Boston Braves to-day, and by winning two games increased their lead over the Cubs a full game. They are resting comfortable to-night, thank you. New York had to play their level best and inflict their two best twirlers, Marquard and Mathewson, on the Braves in the first game before the Bostonese were subdued in a twelve-inning strife.

It was a terrific home run punch by Larry Doyle in the twelfth session with two men out, that shoved three runs over the plate and gave the Giants victory. The score was 5 to 2. The second game went seven innings when darkness fell. New York took it with ease, by a score of 6 to 1.

It was a great day for Mathewson. He won both games, although Marquard pitched eight innings of the first game and pitched well, too. Mathewson in all pitched ten innings and gets the credit for both victories. Marquard would have won the first contest if his support had been perfect, but a costly muff by Larry Doyle in the sixth inning paved the way for Boston's first run. Marquard was taken out when the score was tied to let Becker try his luck and skill as a pinch hitter. Becker failed in his endeavor.

Hub Perdue and Matty were pitching such gilt-edged ball that it looked as if the tussle would go on till nightfall. "The Gallatin squash," however, weakened in the twelfth period. A group of three hits, one, Doyle's homer over the fence, decided the issue.

It was even a greater day for Lawrence Jeremiah Doyle of Breeze, Ill. The Giants' Captain was responsible for every one of the Giants five runs in the first game. He scored three of them himself and drove in the other two with his circuit blow.

Take a peek at what Capt. Larry did. His first two-bagger in the fourth inning, followed by Merkle's two-base drive scored the first run. His double in the sixth inning made it possible for Herzog to shove him home with the second run. His homer in the twelfth rapped in the other three.

Six hits was Boston's limit against Marquard in eight innings. Only one nick did they get in any inning and none in the third and fourth. Two passes he issued paved the way for both Boston runs. There were two out in the sixth inning, when Doyle butted into Merkle's baliwick and muffed a rocket. A single by Titus followed and scored the first run. In the eighth a walk and a two-base welt by Titus gave the Braves their second run.

Mathewson had the Braves in the palm of his lily white talon in the second game and held them to six hits, while New York slammed Donnelly off the mound and took a commanding lead.

Beantown expects that the Giants will surely be here to play the Red Sox for the world's title and they turned out in great numbers to-day. A crowd of more than 15,000 jammed into the southend grounds. It was the biggest crowd that has seen a ball game there since way back in 1897, when Boston won a pennant. It would have been impossible to jam another fan into the park with a shoe horn. After the first game started more than 5,000 people stormed the gates and were refused admission.

The stands were crowded and the outfield with bugs behind the ropes, which limited hits into the crowd to two bases. Thousands sat in the wet grass and courted pneumonia germs.

Devore and Campbell electrified the crowd with phenomenal grabs which were only possible by dashing into the crowd and grabbing the ball as they tumbled over the frightened multitude.

The first Gotham inhabitant to command attention in the first game was Rube Marquard in the third inning. Richard slammed a grasser to second base and, What do you think? He beat it to first. While Devore was shamelessly striking out, Rube again called upon his sprinting talent and stole second. But listen. It was muddy at second, and Rube slid far over the bag. Sweeney plastered Rube with the ball before he could get back to dry land.

Lawrence Doyle teased the left field foul line for a two-sacker in the fourth inning. Snodgrass sacrificed him to third. After Murray lifted a foul to Houser, Merkle crashed a double into the left field crowd, scoring Doyle.

Al Bridwell opened the fifth inning with a hit, and Kling skied to Devore. Perdue laced a steaming liner to Doyle, who doubled Bridwell off first base. Doyle's finger was split making the catch, but he was first up in the next inning and slammed a double into the left field crowd. Snodgrass got a pass and Red Murray then proceeded to put himself out. He bunted and ran into the ball. Merkle crashed a hit to centre, which was labeled for two pillows. Campbell leaped into the air and speared the ball with one hand as it was going into the crowd. A wonderful grab. Herzog singled to right, scoring Doyle, and pushing Snodgrass to third. Wilson was tossed out by McDonald.

Danger lurked at the Giants' doorstep in the same round. Campbell's skier was squeezed near the lawn by Devore. McDonald walked and Sweeney popped to Wilson. Jackson lifted a high fly back of first base, which would have been easy for Merkle, but ambitious Larry Doyle called for it and made an ignominious muff. McDonald going to third, and he chalked up a run when Titus singled to left. Marquard halted the Braves and made Houser hoist to Wilson.

Bridwell opened the seventh inning with a blazing double into the centre field folks, but Rube allowed him to proceed not an inch, the next three expired, eln, swei, dret.

Now for the doleful news. McDonald walked in the eight inning, and was sacrificed to second by Sweeney. Jackson lifted a fly to Jackson, and then Johnny Titus, the Phillies' castoff, appeared again. Johnny sliced a hit along the right field foul line for two bases, scoring McDonald with the tieing tally.

Giant hopes ran high in the ninth inning, when Merkle singled and Herzog was safe on Bridwell's error. Wilson sacrificed and sent the runners to third and second bases. McCormick, batting for Fletcher, was called out on strikes, and Becker, hitting for Marquard, lined to Campbell in centre field.

Mathewson went in to pitch for the Giants in the last half of the ninth inning, and Bridwell, Kling and Perdue were easy victims.

Not a thrill in the tenth inning. No spasm of emotion in the eleventh. But say, neighbor, the Giants set a charge of dynamite under Hub Perdue in the tumultuous twelfth; yes, and Larry Doyle was the citizen who lighted the fuse.

"Tug" Wilson ripped a double to left and Burns romped for him. Shafer sacrificed him to third, and when Matty grounded to Perdue Burns was put out trying to score. Don't lose heart. Its a long, damp afternoon yet. Devore was there with a single to left just when it was welcome. Ring the joy bells. Here's Capt. Larry with his sore finger. Does the pain worry him? Yes, it makes him mad. Larry looked one of Perdue's slants over and let it breeze by. He slapped his furniture against the next one, and with all the gentleness of a pile driver whaled it over the right field fence into Columbus Avenue, shooting Matty and Devore home ahead of him.

All those carrying American flags may now wear them.

Devore opened the second game with a two-bagger into the left field crowd. Doyle slammed a fly into the populace in centre field, but Campbell went after it, and, making a wonderful catch as he fell over on his back. Devore went to third base after the catch and registered on Snodgrass's single to centre.

Mr. Donnelly got very officious in the second inning, and fanned Merkle, Herzog, and Wilson in a row.

Busy little Giants in the second inning. While they were busy Donnelly was extremely nervous. First he hit Fletcher in the ribs, and Matty got a lucky single, and Devore sacrificed. Donnelly purposely walked Doyle, filling the bases. Donnelly then gave Snodgrass a ticket, forcing in Fletcher. Murray slammed a double to left, scoring Matty and Doyle. Snodgrass scored on a wild pitch. Do you follow it? Merkle then welted a single to left, scoring Murray. Merkle was out trying to stretch himself to second, and Herzog died at first. The Giants were dizzy after that merry whirl.

Donnelly was then released to get home to dinner, Tyler going to the firing line. Mathewson held the braves in their place until the seventh, when, with one gone, Rariden singled and went to third on Tyler's double to right. Campbell's sacrifice fly scored Rariden.

Then darkness enveloped the scene. Umpire Rigler called it a day, and the Giants went to their baked beans happy.

LARRY'S DAY OF LABOR.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 2.—Larry Doyle is the anarchist who put the might in dynamite.

Part of the crowd which couldn't get in draped itself on the surrounding buildings, telegraph poles, freight cars, and factory roofs.

Marquard had a fine workout of eight innings all for nothing. Before the game Jeff Tesreau was hit in the nose and he looked as if he had been in a fight with somebody as big as himself.

Some of the Boston players would like to have played three games instead of a double header. Then they might have had a chance of getting a hit.

Chief Meyers was left behind in New York laid up with a strained leg, and "Tug" Wilson isn't letting a thing get past him in the meantime.

Boston, usually a quiet, cultured hamlet, is talking baseball for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Music, art, literature won't even get a chance until the world's series is over.

Boston fans think that if it takes the Giants twelve innings to beat the tailend Braves, it will be a shame to think of what the Red Sox will do to them. Up there there has been only one real baseball team since the game began, and that crowd is this year's Red Sox.

Again mentioning Larry, you know he made the last putout of the first game by climbing high into the azure and picking Vincent Campbell's screeching liner out of the wind with one fin.

The Giants held a mass meeting to-night and extended a vote of thanks to the washout that gave the Cubs a day off. Manager McGraw says they needed the rest.

Bonfires at Cincinnati Game.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 2.—Cincinnati won both games of a double header here this afternoon from St. Louis, at the close of which one of the most remarkable sights ever seen on the local ball park was witnessed. It was almost dark and the crowd had been calling for a called game. When Umpire Eason refused to listen to the cries, bonfires, made of programmes, sprang up all over the park, and in a few moments thousands of them were in evidence. Eason insisted on the game being played out, however. McLean was hit in the head with a bat in the first game and retired. The opening contest was featured by great fielding. The scores:

The Boston Red Sox, coming champions of the American League, twice triumphed over the Yankees in closely waged pitching duels at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. In the opener Russell Ford forced victory on the visitors by making a balk with a runner on third base, and the score tied in the eighth inning, Boston winning 2 to 1. In the second game the Yankees were helpless before Joe Wood when opportunities to score presented themselves, and the Beantown pitching star scored a shutout, 1 to 0. The victory was Wood's thirtieth this season, as well as his fourteenth straight win and his eighth shutout.

The chance to get a line on the Giants' opponents in the coming world's series proved a magnet for the fans, and, despite the inclement weather, a crowd of 20,000 turned out to witness the double engagement. Rain fell throughout the first game, and during the early part of the second. At the beginning of the double bill it seemed doubtful that the teams could get through the five innings necessary to constitute a full game and render rain checks void, but once the danger mark was passed the shower became lighter. The wet grounds had no effect on the fielding, however, and the fans were treated to exhibitions that were always accurate and often spectacular. A slight fumble by Heinie Wagner was the only slip in the first game, and two wide throws by George McConnell were the only mistakes in the second game.

Hugh Bedient opposed Russell Ford in the first game, and the Red Sox slab artist surely deserved to win. Up to the eighth inning it looked as if one scratch hit was to cost Bedient a defeat, but in this chapter the Red Sox dented Ford's service for a single and a triple, the latter being converted into the winning run on Ford's balk. The only clean hit off Bedient was made by Hal Chase, with two out in the Yankees' half of the ninth inning. Bedient allowed a pass and a hit in the second inning and again in the ninth. In the other seven innings the Yankees went out in order.

Ford was touched up for eight hits and gave five passes, but the combination of fast fielding by his mates and tightening up by Ford at the trying moments kept the Red Sox in the background in every inning except the eighth. In this chapter Carrigan opened on Ford with a single, and Henriksen was substituted to run for the Boston catcher. He moved along to second on Bedient's sacrifice, but was thrown out at third base by Chase when Hooper batted into the Yankee's hands. Yerkes followed with a triple to centre, which tied up the score, and Ford passed Speaker. He made a balk to first base, and Yerkes scored the winning run.

The Yanks' only run came in the second inning. With two out and Lelivelt on second, after a pass and a steal, Hartzell hit a short fly to right field. It would have been an easy put-out for Hooper, but he slipped on the wet grass and fell as the ball dropped safely about two feet away. Lelivelt scored on this fluke hit, the only one that Bedient allowed up to the ninth inning. Just before Chase got his hit in the ninth inning the Yankees lost a fine opportunity to score. Paddock batted for Ford and walked, later taking second on McMillan's sacrifice. While Chase was at bat Cady, who had succeeded Carrigan, threw to Wagner at second and caught Paddock off the base.

In the second game Boston scored the winning run in the first inning. Hooper greeted McConnell with a single to centre, reached second on McConnell's poor throw to catch him at first, took third on Yerkes's sacrifice, and counted on a sacrifice fly to Daniels by Speaker. During the remainder of the game the Red Sox only saw third base twice. McConnell featured in the fielding with eleven assists to first base.

Meanwhile Joe Wood was toying with the Yankees. In five of the nine innings they got runners around to third base, only to have Wood tighten up and retire the side runless. Wood scattered eight hits through six innings, and fanned eight Yankees. After fanning two Yankees in the ninth they filled the bases on two singles and a pass. Then Wood got busy again and fanned McConnell.

HILTON AND EVANS LEAD GOLF FIELD

HERRESHOFF'S SCORE SHORT

Norman Hunter, the Other Foreigner, Gets in with 161—An English Expert's Story of the Day.

WHEATON, Ill., Sept. 2.—The qualifying round of thirty-six holes of the National amateur golf championship ended at dusk to-night with the two players generally conceded to be the strongest contenders for the title tied for the medal score trophy. Fred Herreshoff, runner-up last year, failed to qualify.

Harold Hilton of the Royal Liverpool Golf Club, the title holder, and Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, Chicago, ended the day with 152 each, and will play off for the title for golf medalist later in the week. Each had a 74 in the morning and a 78 in the afternoon.

Hilton could probably have done some strokes better, but was playing a most deliberately safe game the whole way through, and was never once trapped in any hazard. Some of his strokes showed again the old hand of the master, notably when he played a beautiful pitched iron to first green to avoid a bunker, which, incidentally, trapped his brother Britisher, Norman Hunter, and made that hole cost him 7, as against Hilton's 4.

Norman Hunter made a bad beginning, but after that, with somewhat uneven play, ran through with a total of 81, which served his purposes for the time being.

Evans's play on the last hole of the day cheered his admirers. He pulled his drive into an unplayable lie in the rough. He could not play it toward the green, so he drove it with an iron into the polo field adjoining the links. There he was stymied by a tree, but he lifted his ball over the tree to the green and holed a twenty-foot put. Hilton watched the stroke and led the applause that greeted Evans.

C. B. Devol of Riverside Club, Chicago, made a strong challenge for medal honors in the forenoon with a 73, but failed to repeat in the afternoon, having to be content with an 82. This, however, put him well toward the front, as prospects of records were marred in the afternoon by a hard thunderstorm that drenched the players and slowed up the links.

At the end of the day Howard Perrin of the Morion Cricket Club, and Fred Herreshoff and Heinrich Schmidt of Worcester were tied at 164 for last place among the thirty-two who qualified. One hole, played at sundown, was enough to settle the tie. Herreshoff, who had been doing badly all day, drove well, but sent his brassie into a bunker, sent it clear across the green with his niblick, and missed a long put. Perrin tied his brassie shot, which ended his chances, and Schmidt took the hole easily. This eliminated Herreshoff as a contender this year.

Fourteen players to qualify this year are from clubs around Chicago. Nineteen of them are Western players, eleven are from the East, and two are Englishmen. The best scores of the day, except Hilton's, were made by Chicago men.

Kenneth Edwards and Paul and Robert Hunter, all of Midlothian, turned in 154 and two 155s respectively. Albert Seckel of Riverside had 154. D. E. Sawyer of Wheaton had 155. Metropolitan Champion Jerome Travers scored 156, with 81 in the afternoon.

L. E. Maxwell and Mason Phelps will lead off in the morning at 9:30 for the first day of match play at thirty-six holes. The weather is cooler and the greens have been put in top condition by to-day's rain.

ENGLISH VIEW OF GAME.

Henry Leach, British Expert, Describes Conditions on Links.

Special to The New York Times.

WHEATON, Ill., Sept. 2.—Henry Leach, the English golf writer, who has been sent to the United States by The London Times especially to describe this international tournament, cabled the following to his newspaper after to-day's play:

"Conditions have been still further revised to the point that a full thirty-six holes of qualifying competition in the amateur golf championship tournament were played to-day. Thirty-two players qualified and to-morrow the first round of match play will consist of thirty-six holes instead of eighteen, as formerly. This made the test perfect so far as man could make it. Man and nature conbined to make it excellent so far as the course was concerned, the links improving much on acquaintance. The fairway is hard, but has a good body of grass on it, but either inclined to yield cuppy lies. Inasmuch as irons, however, are most frequently wanted for second shots through long driving, this is not such a disadvantage as if much brassie play were demanded. Better putting greens nobody need ever wish to play upon, being smooth, close cut, and velvety and beautifully true.

"Then nature alone made the test drastically thorough in another respect. The overpoweringly hot weather of the past few days had not abated this morning. When the golfers rose perspiringly from their beds and perspiringly teed up their balls on the first tee, the thermometer crept up high in the nineties and remained there all morning while playing in the first round went on.

"Soon after the second round had been commenced a little wind arose which was welcomed save for what it portended, and a little later rain came down in heavy sheets and was hurled round the links in swirling volume by a full gale of wind. Such conditions completely demoralized a majority of the players, but the old hands kept their heads and played shots which made some headway.

"The American players for the most part played a steady, straight game, and were thoroughly good until they were puzzled as to how to get to a hole when exceptional difficulties presented themselves. None of them could play curling shots like Hilton did at the first hole. On the other hand, such players as Jerome Travers and Herbert Inslee, who tied for fourth place in the morning round, displayed remarkable accuracy.

"Travers's game has improved, and he was nearly at his best this morning, while Inslee, who putts with a club of Schenectady pattern, with back cut away to give a face for playing left-handed shots, plays a remarkable game in the circumstances of his case, and would have returned the best morning score but for melancholy disasters at short holes. After the early storm the afternoon quieted down to peaceable and pleasant conditions, and our men finished in a happy state.

"There was some excitement at the close of the day when little light was left. There was a tie among three players for last qualifying place, and it happened that Fred Herreshoff, who was the man who made such a great fight against Hilton in the final last year, was one. According to American custom all three players set out to play the first hole, the rule being that the one who did it in the lowest score qualified, in case of ties, players going further. Herreshoff topped his second and was out of it, hole and place being won by Heinrich Schmidt, a Massachusetts player.

RIDGEWOOD GOLFERS OUT.

Hohokus Cup Up for Competition—Two Handicap Classes.

Rain did not deter the members of the Ridgewood Golf Club from taking part in the programme arranged for the holiday, for large fields were the rule in all competitions. Play for Mary Garden Cup.

Army officers, physicians, lawyers, actors, brokers, and others prominent in the professional and financial world participated in a competition on the Oakland Golf Club links at Bayside yesterday, for which one of the incentives was a cup donated by Mary Garden, the operatic singer. Under the rules governing the contest for that trophy sixteen are to qualify to play later in the season at match play. In the season's play the committee designated that four should qualify in each of four of the biggest handicaps of the season.

Yesterday's handicap marked the third installment of the qualifying round for the Garden Trophy. The final qualifying round will be played on Saturday, Sept. 14, after which the sixteen players will meet at match play. The trophy presented by Miss Garden is one of the most elaborate that has ever been put up for competition at the Oakland Club. Before yesterday's play C. B. Beckwith, P. H. Moore, Cass Stevens, E. Scott McKnight, H. Alhers, A. E. Schaff, J. H. Gordon, and E. Guillandeau had qualified.

Aside from the interest that centred in yesterday's event, because of the fact that the possession of the Garden Trophy might be determined by the showing made, a cup was offered for the winner of the Labor Day Handicap, the scores in that event being the same as those in the third leg for the Garden Cup. Frank H. Rossiter won by returning not only the best gross score but the best net score of the day. With a 72 he was just one stroke ahead of Cyril Scott and Commander Sawyer. These three players, together with C. S. Goss, will be afforded an opportunity to compete for the Garden Trophy as a result of yesterday's play. The best scores follow: Frank H. Rossiter, 81—9—72; Cyril Scott, 91—18—73; Commander Sawyer, 97—24—73; C. S. Goss, 86—12—74; Col. Dunn, 95—18—75; R. H. White, 81—10—75; C. E. Landale, 97—22—75; H. S. Graham, 98—21—77; T. S. FOOLING THE FARMERS.

Mr. ROOSEVELT has taken his stand in Vermont for the repeal of the Canadian reciprocity legislation. He has done so, if we can judge his motives by his general conduct, in order to get the votes of the farmers of the northern border, some of whom are afraid that reciprocity will lessen the prices of their product. He is all the more disposed to this course because reciprocity was distinctly a policy of Mr. TAFT, whom he dislikes, and is the policy of Gov. WILSON and his party, whom he dreads.

Now, there is nothing in the act of reciprocity with Canada that can in any way hurt the farmers either of the East or of the Northwest, and it is a step toward that reform of our clumsy and hindering tariff system which would be of the greatest help to our farmers as a class. Under that tariff system the farmers and the workingmen are the classes that give but do not get, that are heavily taxed to put into the pockets of others profits that they do not share. Of the two classes it is hard to say which one is cheated most, most meanly and most generally, but that the farmers are constantly and inevitably cheated there is no room for reasonable doubt. They pay multiple taxes on everything they use on their fields or in their families, and they do not get a cent's advantage—save in some small sections—in what they sell. The taxes they pay are not to the Government Treasury alone, though these are considerable, but to the favorites of the tariff, in some cases powerfully and ruthlessly organized in close and oppressive monopolistic combinations.

In the case of the Harvester Trust, the bonds are forged openly, and they are not the less odious because the Government prosecutes the Trust on the one hand while giving to it the tremendous advantage of barring out all effective foreign competition. In the case of the Beef Trust, the same "protection" enables the beneficiaries of the tariff practically to fix the prices that farmers may obtain for all their meat products. In the case of the Steel Trust, and of all manufactures of metals, the farmer pays heavily toward profits in which there is no division with him. In the case of the manufactures of textiles, clothing, bedding, carpeting, &c., the added cost is levied on daily necessaries of life, and is heaviest upon those which are indispensable. And so it works through every branch of needful expenditure every day in the year and all the years of the farmer's none-too-easy life. If Mr. ROOSEVELT, or Mr. TAFT, either, for that matter, can win farmers' votes by pleading the gross delusion of "protection," the tillers of the soil must be hopelessly fond of being fooled.

ANTI-TYPHOID.

In the current issue of The Lancet appears a report by Lieut. W. BROUGHTON-ALCOCK of the British Royal Army Medical Corps, following experiments by Dr. ELIE METCHNIKOFF and Dr. BESREDKA, which announces a vaccination for typhoid fever by means of the living bacilli. This represents a notable step in advance over the Wright-Leishman method, by means of killed bacilli. MM. METCHNIKOFF and BESREDKA proved by experiments on chimpanzees that weakened bacilli typhosi, given by the mouth in large doses, prevented subsequent infections which produced typhoid fever in chimpanzees not thus treated.

Its great advantage over the method of inoculation so successfully employed in the chief armies of the world is that the injection of living bacilli causes no subsequent pain or general reaction of any kind. Lieut. BROUGHTON-ALCOCK thus describes a first dose of the new vaccine, about 500,000,000 bacilli typhosi, upon women of varied ages (from twenty to fifty-seven years) and of varied weights:

> With one exception of a young woman of very small stature, whose temperature rose to 38 degrees Centigrade during the first forty-eight hours after the first injection, but which was unaffected by any subjective or objective system, there was no rise of temperature, no headache, lassitude, or other subjective symptom, and each continued in her ordinary occupations without restriction.

The objection to the prevalent method of vaccinating for typhoid fever has been that it might, like smallpox vaccination, produce a reaction that would require alteration of diet, increased hours of repose, or cessation from work for a few days. In the cases of 750 persons who have been inoculated by the new method with a minimum dose of 500,000,000 bacilli for women, 750,000,000 for men, and a second dose a week later of double these amounts, Lieut. BROUGHTON-ALCOCK reports satisfactory results, with "no general reaction, and "only an insignificant local reaction "following the injections." He adds:

> The patient is in no way obliged to change his daily routine of living. These results are in marked contrast with my experience of the reactions following the injections of the same number of killed bacilli in the vaccine of WRIGHT-LEISHMAN.

The resultant immunity, judged by the increased activity of phagocytes of the white blood corpuscles, is more complete than that produced by the older method of inoculation. Moreover, later experiments on both man and chimpanzee have shown that, by the new method, the risk of producing "carriers" of the infection is removed.

A CHANCE FOR IDEALISTS.

Mr. ROOSEVELT explains that the pecuniary support of his campaign is derived largely from idealists; that is to say, from the same kind of people who give generously to parks, playgrounds, museums, hospitals, and social settlements. Wherefore he thinks it would be wrong to limit the amount of contributions to $10,000. To limit contributions to a reactionary cause, he points out, is perfectly fair. But there are only a few idealists with much to give and their generosity should not be restrained by paltry rules.

He welcomes all contributions of an ideal sort, including the $500 he has received from a grateful mother whose family must, because of this giving way to the impulse for idealism, wear last Fall's dresses again this Fall. Also he was much touched by receiving $10 from the mother of a 10-year-old boy, recently deceased, given "because the boy had always admired me and read about me." We do not recall a passage comparable with this in the writings of any other American statesman.

Idealists are reminded that, while small contributions are gratefully received, large ones will be just as welcome and that the authentic stamp of idealism will be impressed on all who give to the cause. The money must be real, but the giver will be idealized. But it is the idealism the Colonel is grateful for, and he thinks as well of Judge BEN LINDSEY, who has no money to give, as he does of Mr. PERKINS. He has done nothing better, in its way, than this appeal to idealism and the idealists in the closing passages of his latest manifesto. His published works contain nothing quite so precious. The idealists cannot fail to be moved.

"GRABBING" TIBET.

When two of the chief journals of the party in power in England severely criticise the policy of the Government in regard to a foreign question, it is fairly certain that the question is a serious one. It is also to be inferred that it is one of that class of questions as to which British Governments, quite without regard to home parties, are apt to act with consistency, foresight, and energy. The London Chronicle, an organ of the more radical and "advanced" wing of the Liberal Party, and especially noted for its "pacifist" enthusiasm, and The London News, of like predilections, sharply condemn the reported action of the Government as to Tibet. This action consists in warning the Chinese Government that the acknowledged suzerainty of China in Tibet must not be allowed to lead to the exercise of actual sovereignty.

This warning was called out by the preparations made to send a Chinese army into Tibet, the somewhat loose Government of which had, at the time of the fall of the imperial dynasty, declared its independence. In its immediate consequences the question of Chinese military intervention in Tibet is not necessarily of importance. Its real, or, at any rate, its international interest, lies in its relation to the probable course of Great Britain, Russia, and Japan in the Orient, and on the reaction of this course upon the "balance" of the European nations. The critics of the British Government at home and abroad see in the check administered to China a sign that these three Governments contemplate some sort of division of the Celestial territory. They predict that Great Britain will take Tibet, besides its "sphere" in the Yang-tse-Kiang Valley; that Russia will take Mongolia and Japan Manchuria. That seems a forecast without a very solid foundation of fact, though it is not beyond the range of ultimate possibility.

It is plain, of course, that each of these three Governments has a special interest in the regions respectively lying along the border or within easy distance of their frontiers or the frontiers of their possessions. In the case of Great Britain the frontier of India, Nepal and Rhutan, stretches from east to west along the entire southern boundary of Tibet for some 1,500 miles. Though the greater part of Indian territory along this line is flanked by the Himalaya ranges, Tibet is a land which Great Britain has always regarded as a dangerous possession should it fall into unfriendly, or even into weak, hands from which more powerful and unfriendly hands could seize it. It is not unnatural that the British Government should insist that the status of China in Tibet should remain within the limits heretofore acknowledged. The Government of China is far too feeble and distracted to be installed with safety in full possession of a region of such obvious importance in its possible relation to the Indian Empire.

As to the implication of an agreement between Russia, Japan, and Great Britain, it may be said to be quite logical. Between Great Britain and Japan it exists in the form of a treaty pledging the aid of each to the other in maintaining actual possessions and interests in the Orient against aggression. It is also an open secret that Great Britain and Russia have sought a general understanding as to the Orient and, in connection with France, as to Europe as well. Are these agreements and understandings contrary to the rights and interests of other nations? No one can securely say. It would certainly be denied by all the Governments concerned. The crux of the whole business lies in the policy of these Governments as to the two principles to which they are all committed—the integrity of China and the open door. It does not seem likely that other nations will readily permit the abandonment of these principles, or that the three Powers directly involved would care to provoke the opposition that would surely follow an attempt at such abandonment.

THE LESSON OF NICARAGUA.

The present position of our Government in regard to Nicaragua is very bad indeed. The President should proclaim without delay the fixed intention of the United States not to intervene. While the investigating spirit is uppermost in our politics, a thorough and wholly public inquiry into our relations with all the Latin-American countries, and especially with those of Central America, is desirable. It is possible that the right kind of men are not appointed to represent us in those countries. Men of high character and large diplomatic experience are needed.

The people are anxious to know just how far the Government at Washington has been involved in certain so-called revolutions. Charges are frequently made that the State Department has materially assisted one side or another, and in the interest of various promoters of trade seeking concessions. It is likely that these charges are frequently founded on the malice or disappointment of promoters whose plans have failed. The truth about the whole matter should be known, and quickly, and the Government's policy touching the countries between our border and the Panama Canal should be revised and clarified without needless delay.

LARCENY AND COST OF LIVING.

One of this State's new laws, which took effect Sept. 1, merits consideration, if not grave approval, in that it recognizes the high cost of living to the thief. For a generation, at least, the minimum sum on which a charge of grand larceny might be based has been $25; the new law specifies that "property of the value of more than $50" must be taken if the person accused is to be tried on this indictment.

Some merciful Magistrate has noted the relation that exists between the difference in commodity prices to-day and twenty years ago, and the temptation to purloin commodities not one's own at the present higher prices. Some prisoner, we fancy, has made this simple and ingenuous plea to the Judge, who thereupon drew the attention of legislators to his case. For the just and the unjust, for the honest man and the criminal, the cost of living has risen. It may not be 100 per cent. higher, but it seems like it, and it is climbing. Even the larcenous are protesting against its cruel effects.

SKAT AND POKER.

We have profound admiration and respect for any human being who is so richly equipped, intellectually, as to be able to acquire a passable working knowledge of the card game called skat. But when our fellow-townsman, Mr. HERMAN RIDDER, declares that skat is destined to "crowd out America's National game of poker" we protest. Prolonged and patient service in the game of auction bridge with the new count might qualify one to enter the preparatory classes of a skat university. But a mastery of skat can only be obtained by a lifetime of patient endeavor.

Poker players are born, not made. A man may excel in that pursuit while constitutionally unable to comprehend a gucki nullo, determine the comparative value of a wenzel and an unterbube or tell the difference between a frage and a tourné. In poker a simple couple of three-spots is as good as a quartet of aces until the "call." In skat the most dazzling array of cards one might hold would be valueless if one had not mastered a few thousand rules and learned strange terms enough to fill a sizable volume of small print.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Unpopularity Fully Explained.

Doubts as to whether the parcels post, as planned, is going to prove a public blessing as great as prophesied by those who drew the bill have hitherto been rather widespread among those who realize the difficulties which our enormous territorial extension creates and how short is the step that has been taken toward providing a substitute for the service now rendered by the express companies. Such doubts will wane rapidly, however, if officials of those companies continue to talk as did the General Superintendent of one of them, the United States, in a speech of instruction to his subordinates, delivered in Jersey City.

Not only did this injudicious person, apparently forgetful of the possibility that his remarks might be published, say that his corporation was menaced by such loss of profits as would compel it to go out of business. He also took occasion to jeer at, as "trivial," the grievances of the public which had at last forced the Government to the action condemned by him as "folly." As a type of these trivial grievances he brought up the collection of fees on prepaid packages, and, as a good joke, he said that it had been the custom, when such a complaint was received, to write a suave letter stating that it had been entered for investigation as No. 7,536,921, with the further information that the company was then investigating No. 3,031.

These figures are the Superintendent's own, and though one suspects him of a slight humorous exaggeration, his was unquestionably one of the many true words that are spoken in jest. At any rate, his mental attitude, his contempt for outside criticism and for people who make a row over such a small matter as the double collection of an express charge, is one that has been long familiar to the customers of these companies.

And he was quite right in declaring that things like this—things for which he blamed the carelessness or dishonesty of minor employés and not the companies that let them go on year after year—were what had started and brought to a sort of success the movement for a parcels post in this country. It has not been high charges as much as the mysteries marking their collection that turned every man's hand—and tongue—against these corporations.

Eugenists Are Not Burbanks.

As Dr. DAVID STARR JORDAN, the President of Leland Stanford University, has written a really excellent presentation, in popular form, of eugenic facts, theories, and expectations—it is called "The Heredity of Richard Roe" and is well worth anybody's reading—one cannot help being both surprised and grieved to learn that he has addressed to the eugenists a grave warning against trying to "Burbank the human race."

Such advice as that is familiar enough, since it comes every day from people who know little about Mr. BURBANK'S work and nothing at all about eugenics. As Dr. JORDAN is a well-informed scientist, with a knowledge of both, one is almost forced to the conclusion that he was misquoted in the "authorized statement" containing this strange passage, the natural assumption being, of course, that as he knows better he couldn't have said it. Be that as it may, and whether he said it or not, as a matter of plain, easily ascertainable fact, no eugenist worthy of the name dreams of applying to the human race any methods of selection or improvement even remotely resembling those of the so-called "plant wizard."

Mr. BURBANK raises seedlings by the hundreds of thousands, picks out two or three or a dozen as promising to grow into what he desires, and ruthlessly kills all the others. In other words, he simply hastens the blind, slow plan of Nature to eliminate the unfit and save the fit. The eugenist follows, or would follow, a path quite different. His ideal, perhaps, is some day by taking thought to mate good with good and so to produce better, but his present purpose and hope is only to extend, little by little, that avoidance of the obviously injudicious which already exists and is everywhere practiced. He believes as strongly as anybody else in letting personal preference determine who shall marry; his aim is to make the preference an enlightened one—to add, one after another, a few more classes to those whose unfortunate members nobody now thinks of marrying because nobody wants to.

This is not "Burbanking the human race," nor is it "applying to humanity the rules of the stock farm," which is the other common—and stupid—accusation against the eugenists.

Unpleasant for the Marquis.

Most of us have read anywhere from a dozen to a hundred more or less detailed descriptions and histories of the Alhambra, written with more or less enthusiasm by authors of more or less eminence. Most of us, therefore, thought that we knew, if not all about that magnificent relic of the Moors in Spain, at least the interesting and important facts concerning it.

Therefore is it most surprising to learn that this, perhaps the most famous of national monuments, has for a hundred years been private property, or at any rate held and used as such. Now, after a lawsuit that long promised to be interminable, a high court has decided that the Alhambra belongs to the King, and therefore to the State, and not to the Marquis CAMPOTEJAR, (that name doesn't look just right, but so the dispatches give it.)

A Mayor of Granada, it seems, turned the palace over to the ancestors of this Marquis—one cannot help wondering why, that is, how much—and it has come down the line as an asset, disputed but profitable. At last it must be given up, which is painful, no doubt; but what is even harder for the Marquis, he must pay to the State the value of all the fruit that has been raised in the Alhambra gardens in the century that has passed since it came into the possession of his family!

Apparently adverse possession counts for nothing in Spain and no Statute of Limitations runs there. It is obvious, however, that the Alhambra ought to belong to Spain, if nothing more than as a reminder of one of her many colossal mistakes—the expulsion of a great group of valuable citizens.

WOMAN'S QUANDARY.

Her Heart Wavers Between Two Political Suitors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I never was in such a quandary in my life; two of the finest gentlemen in all America, I might say in the whole world, are wooing me. And both tell me almost exactly the same thing; only, one says it in a "you must" way, and the other says it in a "will you?" way. The Governor has the mild, calm, deliberate manner and speech that court reliance; the Colonel has the quick, snap-shot eye and resolute bearing of the soldier, who sees assured victory and makes an instantaneous charge for it, despite the possible securing.

What shall I do? The Colonel promises if I take him, that I shall "join with him in regulating politics." (I wonder if I would really have my say—and if it would be listened to.) The Governor doesn't promise anything about that; I rather suspect he will do his own regulating and give me the cream of it.

They both promise that "corruption shall put on the incorruptible," and therefore, I shall be able to buy fine clothes for less money than heretofore, and all my undomiciled friends shall "sit under their own vine and fig tree," and "the land shall flow with milk and honey"—when they are through regulating.

Dear me! Whatever shall I do! "How happy could I be with either were t'other dear charmer away."

Well, I'll wait till next November, then may be I can decide.

Praise from a Progressive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one actively engaged in the Progressive movement I desire to congratulate and praise you for the stand which your paper is taking in the fight. I am moved to write you at the kindly suggestion of many co-workers so that you may feel that your fairness is being recognized by hordes of those citizens in New York City that appreciate fair play.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

How It Figures in This Campaign—Record of Both Parties.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 2.—Maine is not only the habitat of the bull moose, but it also gives asylum to men whose tongues have been touched by fire from the high altar of Eloquence. There is the Hon. Benedict F. Maher of Augusta, a Republican spellbinder who is always "greeted with cheers that threaten to bring down the roof" whenever he appears to plead the cause of his party, and who, in addition to a nimble fancy, possesses the higher and more effective gift of being able to cover his Democratic opponents with sarcasm. In a recent address to five or six hundred Republicans in the Opera House at Richmond he was "interrupted by frequent bursts of applause" as he pictured the unhappy political estate of Obadiah Gardner, the Democratic candidate for United States Senator, who now fills the shoes of the dead Mr. Frye—and fills them well, or as well as could be expected, seeing that Obadiah is a modest man of the soil and not one of the petted darlings of the big interests. In his scorching way Mr. Maher started by saying: "Democracy, with brow unclouded and nerve supreme, presents the Hon. Obadiah Gardner as a Solon of moderns, and perforce possessed, in the ripest measure, of those qualities needed to restore Maine's prestige in the Senate of the United States." That was meant to be Pickwickian, but it was true, as it aptly portrays the character of Obadiah, who will be elected next week by a majority which will show Mr. Maher the futility of blowing against the wind that listeth not of him and his party.

It appears from the record that William R. Pettengall, a Democrat in good and regular standing, was not fully convinced three years ago of the eminent qualifications of Mr. Gardner, and that he made in a speech in the Legislature some rather strenuous remarks about this man of the people, "scourging," we are told by Mr. Maher, "with the stinging lash of a merciless tongue the hirelings who were fighting in the serried ranks of greed-glutted timberland owners a tax measure known as the 'Wild Land Tax,'" and this assault Mr. Maher would now seek to turn to Mr. Gardner's confusion, when everybody knows that such a thing cannot be done without treading on the toes of the Hon. E. C. Burleigh, the candidate of Mr. Maher's own party for United States Senator, who has forgotten more about the wild lands of Maine than Mr. Gardner ever knew. This digression, however, is intended only to emphasize the oratorical richness of the State of Maine, and not to divert the attention of the reader from the particular subject of the lesson of the day, which is the matter of prohibition.

"The people of Maine want the prohibition law to stay in the Constitution and on the statute books, but they do not want it enforced." This is the true status of the prohibition cause in Maine, as it was briefly delineated by an old resident to-day, who has given thirty years' study to one of the most perplexing problems of the times. Last year the question of taking prohibition out of the Constitution, or of modifying the Constitution so as to permit the reasonable handling of the question, was submitted to the people. After a vigorous campaign on the part of the Prohibitionists, but a lame and impotent demonstration by the Republicans and Democrats, the proposition to amend was defeated by a majority of less than 1,000 votes. It is asserted that if the opponents of constitutional prohibition, of whom there appear to be nearly as many really in the Republican Party as there are among the Democrats, had spoken as plainly on the subject as Gov. Plaisted and other Democratic campaigners are speaking now, the desired change would have been approved by the people who want the law but do not want it to be enforced.

The prohibition issue will not "cut much ice," as the saying goes, in the present campaign. The Republicans are afraid of it. They have no "policy" touching it. They failed utterly to enforce prohibition when they were in power, and they feel it in their bones that they could not and would not attempt to enforce it if they should be restored to power. In their platform they declare, after noting the defeat of the proposed constitutional amendment at the last election, that "we accept the verdict of the people and are emphatically opposed to all attempts to reopen this question in any form. We demand that the statutes be strictly and honestly enforced. Ours is a Government of law. The law must be respected." In order to have made this powerful declaration effective they should have adopted the style of David, who was not much of a prohibitionist, if all the stories that have been told about him were true, and added the word "Selah," whatever that means. On the other hand, the Democrats have a very definite and clear apprehension of what the matter means, and make in their platform this clear-cut statement of what should be done to relieve Maine of the continuing reproach which must attach to it because of its failure to enforce the provisions of its own Constitution and statutes:

> The prohibitory law has never been and never can be satisfactorily enforced in communities in which public sentiment is opposed to it. Denying to such communities the right to regulate the liquor traffic within their own borders, in some reasonable and practical way, has brought about a system of nullification of law which is repugnant to all right-thinking men. Any law which rests upon the broad principle of local self-government is sure to work out good results among a people like ours, and we propose to use all possible endeavor to amend the Constitution by adding to the prohibitory amendment the following paragraph:
> "This section shall not apply to cities in which the manufacture, sale, and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors may be permitted under such regulations as the Legislature may provide, and whenever 51 per cent. of the legal voters in any town petition the Legislature to grant the inhabitants of said town the privilege herein granted to cities such privilege shall be granted. But in no case shall the Legislature permit the manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors in any city or town without making such permission conditional upon its approval by the voters of said city or town."

There is no doubt of the Democratic position on the question—it is positive and explicit. There is equally little doubt of the Republican position—it is evasive and dishonest. In all the years the Republicans were in authority they did not enforce the law, and they must be judged by their failure rather than by their present empty profession that "the law must be respected." At the election, when the issue depended upon the will of the people, it is said that all the rumsellers in the State were arrayed on the side of prohibition, as they have found a prosperous business in the State constitutionally opposed to the sale of the stuff, but so weak or so indifferent or so powerless in view of public sentiment that it could not make the law effective. In his speeches during his present campaign for re-election Gov. Plaisted has not dodged this issue or any other issue, but has spoken plainly in favor of the Democratic plan of local option rather than the continuance of the "system of nullification which is repugnant to all right-thinking men."

***

In his campaign book—"Two Years of Democracy"—Kingsbury Piper has incorporated the view expressed by President Taft in one of his lectures at Yale University in which he advanced the very correct view that "nothing is more foolish, nothing more utterly at variance with sound policy than to enact a law which, by reason of the conditions surrounding the community in which it is declared to be law, is incapable of enforcement." Applying this test to the regulation of the liquor traffic in communities which do not want, or which will not enforce, a prohibitory law, the President said: "This result is the great argument in favor of the so-called local option, which is really an instrumentality for determining whether a law can be enforced before it is made operative. In cases where the sale of liquor cannot be prohibited in fact, it is far better to regulate and diminish the evil than to attempt to stamp it out."

***

William T. Haines is the Republican candidate for Governor and has been commended to the Prohibitionists as worthy of their support. It so happens, however, that Haines was County Attorney for Kennebec County for four years and as such was especially intrusted with the duty of enforcing the prohibition law in that county. His success was not brilliant and the Democrats are fairly chortling with glee at the effort now being made to run Haines in on a "dry" platform. While he was County Attorney Haines was called on to act on 674 cases of alleged violations of the liquor law. Of these cases he agreed to a continuance of 229, abandoned the prosecution of 254, obtained fines in 128 cases, and succeeded in the commitment of 33 criminals to jail, not for the violation of the law, but for failure to pay the fines imposed on them. He did not demand in any single instance that an offender should be locked up for violating the law. In the four years of his official life as prosecuting attorney fines amounting to $12,751 were collected. In one year under a Democratic administration of this office fines amounting to $15,875 have been collected from whisky sellers and three men have been sent to jail, making a horrible example of the Democratic way of dealing with the rumsellers. The difference between the Republican and Democratic way of doing things is that under Haines 24 per cent. of convictions was obtained in liquor cases and under his Democratic successor, Williamson, 84 per cent. It would not be surprising if Haines, running for Governor, because of his gentle treatment of the whisky sellers when he was County Attorney, should receive a large part of the blind tiger vote of the State.

***

The prohibition law has not prohibited in Maine, although it has doubtless restricted the sale of the stuff in many of the country districts. There has always been plenty of it and to spare in the larger towns, particularly in the cities. A year or so ago the City Council of Bangor passed a resolution requiring the police to close the bars in that town at an early hour in the evening.

J. C. H.

THE PRACTICING DOCTOR

Learns to Understand the Personal Side of Patients.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To Dr. Theodore C. Janeway's very able appeal for more advanced methods of teaching in our hospitals, I have a few words to add. I agree thoroughly that we should have one or more model institutions in which the best medical teaching, based upon the most perfect system, is employed. Further, I agree that we should obtain many more autopsies than we now have.

On the other hand, we should recognize that the highest medical acumen in diagnosis does not necessarily make the best practitioner either in medicine or surgery. The most learned professor may not have that intuitive sense, that humane appreciation which brings man into closest brotherhood, and it is this sine qua non, as I believe, which is acquired usually by years of tried service for one's fellows outside of hospitals, which seeks for and recognizes in patients a great deal that neither physical methods nor laboratory research can reveal.

The unknown quantity, the functional asset, so to speak, of men and women, which is so variable and ever changing, and which frequently has little to do apparently with changes of organs, must inevitably concern us most deeply. It is the side which is nowadays too often and too much lost sight of.

We can never tell in advance accurately how this should be met and cared for. Every new case is a law to itself; every patient affords a lesson which he alone may teach.

CAMPAIGN CHECKS.

Should the Ban on Honest Gifts from Corporations Be Removed?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Nobody loves a fat man," a friend says now and then; but one should accord even to fat friends a square deal. Our fat friends, the corporations, have their troubles. Suppose two competing factories, one owned by a corporation, the other not. There should be some limit to the different treatment meted out. If the Federal tax does not cover the difference, let us get an idea as to how many handicaps the corporation is to labor under, clap them on, and then treat it as we treat other owners of wealth.

We do not object to individuals giving large or small amounts toward election expenses. These expenses, if heavy, are not desirable, for they tend to lower the average intelligence of those actually voting, by bringing in those who otherwise would not trouble to vote, having no strong convictions. Within these limits the writer cannot see why the Directors of a corporation are not better fitted to protect their shareholders against destructive political agencies than the shareholders are, especially in these days of small holdings. Why assume that when a corporation did help in the past that it was necessarily dishonest, guilty of bribery, in fact?

We have had times when the policy of one of the great parties, as with the free silver craze,) was a distinct menace to ownership of property. We allow corporations to be charitable, but do not now permit them to protect themselves against these direct attacks on their business, which have come more frequently than the panics, and are at times the causes of panics.

In all other respects, the Directors of corporations are entrusted with the care of the properties, but against these insidious political attacks, which call for a more intelligent and perfect defense, they are barred. Make all campaign gifts public, but do not make unfair distinctions.

Surface Car Route Numbers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in THE SUNDAY TIMES on "Route Numbers" sounds a welcome suggestion. The Chicago street railways have adopted such a system for their "through route cars," and the ease with which strangers may be directed or with which Chicagoans may find cars for special routes amply justifies the experiment being made in New York. The banks, stores, &c., gladly print booklets or leaflets to popularize the knowledge of the routes and their numbers.

NEW YORK'S MANY, MANY THEATRES

William Seymour of Charles Frohman's Organization Harks Back to 1828.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading the letter to THE TIMES from Mr. Lee Shubert relative to the superfluity of theatres in this city at the present time, I append another opinion on the same subject—not "mine own," but that of George P. Morris, proprietor and editor of The New York Mirror—a literary magazine—the date of its editorial expression being Feb. 2, 1828, eighty-four years ago. So the cry of "too many theatres" to-day is not a new one.

The item of Mr. Thomas Apthorp Cooper's benefit, and the receipts from same—"over $1,800"—at prices over one-half less than those of to-day—may aid to disabuse the modern mind of its idea that receipts of those days were, like the prices, half of what they are now.

THEATRICALS.

We believe it is now pretty generally conceded that New York cannot adequately support four theatres. Three may live, but two are amply sufficient for all useful dramatic purposes. The thing, however, will remedy itself, and some of them must die of inanition—which, it is for the public to decide. Ever since the opening of the Bowery Theatre, a preternatural excitement has pervaded the theatrical world. The active manager of that really splendid establishment felt that, at its commencement, something extraordinary was required to stamp a decided character on the house and give a tone to his proceedings, and this he completely effected by the engagement of Mr. Forrest, the Signorina, and the French dancers. The other managers also felt that it would never answer to be left behind, and a tremendous competition was the consequence. When one star was not found sufficiently attractive, two, three, and four were clustered together in the same piece. The public, unused to this prodigal display of talent, threw aside all prudential considerations and nightly overflowed the theatre. The effect has been that, by the highly seasoned intellectual bouquets served up to them, their appetites have been so pampered and spoiled that, like practiced gourmands, they have lost all relish for simple, wholesome food, and now think no more of going to a good comedy well played by the regular company than the gourmand would of making a hearty dinner on plain roast beef. In fact, the managers have pushed exertions to the very utmost, and the public are so divided by the attractions as to be unable to reward any of them as they deserve, so that, as old Hardy says, we "foresee" the hour is fast approaching when Mr. Simpson may exclaim to Mr. Gilfert, and Mr. Maywood to Mr. Sandford—"For one or both of us the time is come." Sorry shall we be for the gentlemen who may fall, and perish, in a pecuniary point of view—for some, particularly sorry; but we must console ourselves with the reflection that it will be for the benefit of the survivors.

April 19, 1828.

"The Tragedy of Othello was performed on Monday at the Park Theatre, for the benefit of Mr. Cooper, on which occasion Mr. Forrest performed the character of Iago. The receipts of the house exceeded $1,800."

SCHOOL "SHOPWORK."

Why Have Men Teach It Who Are Not Shopworkers?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letters occasionally published in THE TIMES relative to the errors in our public school system are of deep interest to all who are interested in public education.

The fact seems to be generally recognized that there is too much dabbling in fads—too much time and money wasted in non-essentials. For instance, "shopwork" as conducted in our grammar schools is largely a farce for several reasons.

First—The classes are too crowded. No shop teacher can give proper attention to more than twenty pupils.

Second—The time is too limited. The brief weekly periods allotted for instruction do not give time to accomplish much work.

Third—The initiative of the teacher is weakened or destroyed by iron-bound rules as to models or courses devised or selected and forced upon the teacher by those in authority over him and who are none too well versed in the requirements or in the actual work.

Fourth—The teachers themselves are often incompetent, being selected by examination chiefly for their scholastic acquirements. Their examination in actual shopwork (although this is the subject which they are to teach exclusively) is almost farcical.

Suppose a carpenters' union decided to teach Latin to a class of apprentices and selected a good carpenter to instruct the class!

Why not abolish shopwork in the grammar schools and have vocational high schools in which boys who are "forced" through the grammar schools can spend two or three years working five or six hours a day to learn a definite trade under the instruction of teachers who are skilled mechanics?

Those who desired to enter upon a clerical, scholastic, or professional career could enter high school under the present plan—with modifications.

Would not this be a vast improvement on a system which turns out boys educated or trained for nothing useful who become office boys or clerks, if they do not drift into something worse?

CABINET SCATTERED.

There are only two Senators and hardly half a dozen members of the House in the city. Heads of departments were off duty to-day, with the 50,000 Government clerks, who were paid $3,500,000 on Saturday. Only a few watchmen were at their posts in the various department buildings and in the Capitol.

SINGULAR PERSON.

When first I heard that term Bull Moose,
Its plural plagued me sore;
Could it be Meese to rhyme with geese?—
I pondered o'er and o'er;
Or was it Mice? The question nice
Became a haunting bore;
Till in the night there broke a light;
Ki-yi, ki-yi, I know the why!
The mystery is done;
There isn't any plural, 'cause
The Maker made but one!

AUGUSTA KORTRECHT.

BREAKS HER TROTH TO THERON E. CATLIN

Daughter of ex-Gov. Merriam Will Not Wed Unseated Congressman from St. Louis.

BRIDAL PARTY WAS CHOSEN

Rumor That Mr. Catlin Has Been Supplanted by a Prominent Official of Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The rumor current for the last week that the engagement between Miss Laura Merriam, daughter of ex-Gov. William R. Merriam of Minnesota, and Theron E. Catlin, formerly Congressman from Missouri, had been broken, was confirmed to-day by Miss Merriam's family.

Society will be surprised at the announcement, as everything was in readiness for the wedding, which was to have taken place early in October. The bridal party had been chosen and wedding presents had begun to arrive. No reason is given for the breaking of the engagement, though rumor has it that Mr. Catlin has been supplanted in the affections of Miss Merriam, and that her engagement is shortly to be announced to a prominent official here.

This is the second misfortune that has occurred to Mr. Catlin recently. Only last month he was unseated as a Representative in Congress from the Twelfth District of Missouri on the ground that there had been illegal practices in his campaign for election. Mr. Catlin is a member of a wealthy and prominent St. Louis family. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School, and served one term in the lower house of the Missouri Legislature.

The engagement was announced on July 14 of this year.

Miss Merriam made her début three years ago and has since taken a leading part in society. She is an expert horsewoman and has the distinction of being one of the first girls to go up in an aeroplane. Miss Merriam is a sister of Mrs. John Wheelright of Boston and is a niece of Mrs. James C. Bishop, with whom she spends a portion of every Winter. Another aunt of Miss Merriam is Mrs. Frank Mitchell of New York.

Miss Merriam has been in Washington during the greater part of the Summer visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Paymaster and Mrs. John Merriam, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter. The rest of the time she has been at the Merriam Summer place at Liberty Furnace, Va.

Miss Merriam has taken part in all the prominent equestrian events of the season and has shown horses at the Horse Shows, both here and in New York. She organized the Monday Morning Skating Club and the Monday Evening Dancing Club, both of which were the most prominent events of last Winter.

FOUR CHILDREN WED AT ONCE

Daughters of Arkansas Farmer Married by Quadruple Ceremony.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 2.—A new matrimonial record in Arkansas was established to-day when Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark announced that their four daughters were married to four young planters at one service last night at the Clark country place near Ozark.

The quadruple ceremony united Miss Clark, 22, to Taylor McCain, 21; Miss Selma Clark, 15, to Thomas Welch, 22; Miss Jerusha Clark, 17, to George Powell, 20, and Miss Gladys Clark, 19, to A. H. Williams, 23.

The brides and bridegrooms, after attending the wedding supper, spent last night at the Clark residence, and to-day repaired to their several homes, which have been recently built in the same community.

Labor Day Crowds Fill Theatres.

Labor Day, matinée and evening, assisted by the rain, brought capacity audiences to all of the theatres. At the Hippodrome it became necessary to ask police aid to keep the crowds in check, and the entire house was sold out for both performances before the afternoon show began. At the American Music Hall the vaudeville bill of the regular theatre was repeated on the roof both afternoon and evening, and a large number of people stood on the sidewalk in the afternoon waiting for an opportunity to buy seats for the evening performance. The other theatres had like experiences, and at every house many were turned away for the lack of room.

A dress rehearsal on Sunday evening provided an opportunity for the regular reviewers to see Mr. Charles Klein's stage version of Rex Beach's novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Now a dress rehearsal is never quite the same as an opening performance. The pulse of the regular first night is missing. So, to be fair to the players, the author and producer, something must be taken on faith.

This fact being remembered, it is yet possible to predict popular success for this new melodrama, which, in spite of obvious improbabilities, not to say impossibilities, contains the elements that may bring the laugh or woo the tears.

Making a play from a book is almost always a dubious proposition. But Mr. Klein has done his work very well. He has at least relieved Kirk Anthony of the charge of fickleness which might have been argued against him by discriminating readers of the story. And by darkening the shadows on the husband's character he has created some sort of justification for the wife's attachment to the other man.

It is she who comes to the assistance of Kirk Anthony when, having been "doped," he is relieved of his money, and put aboard a steamship with another man's ticket in his pocket, he lands on the Isthmus.

It is the father, in a harangue to his son and his dissolute companions, who voices the sociological truth behind the melodramatic incidents. "Young men like you," he says, or words to the same effect, "have done more to create social unrest than all the anarchists in the world." Then the older Anthony retires, leaving the young man to his fate, which isn't long in coming.

The first act, which is in three scenes, begins with the lively dive incidents, and finishes on ship-board, where Kirk, after an amusing scene in which his befuddled condition is disclosed, meets for the first time Mrs. Stephen Cortlandt, the young woman who is to play the important part in his career. Cortlandt, it appears, is a very jealous husband. He objects to the attentions of one Remon Alfarez, only to be met by this wife's statement that what he calls love-making is "merely Latin-American politeness." And soon after, Mrs. Cortlandt, from "being a mother to Kirk," comes to have a different feeling for him. Naturally enough, he responds, though she will not allow him to make an open avowal of his passion. Then, after a second act which, at the dress rehearsal, appeared to be badly in need of condensation and liveller acting, the plot thickens in the husband's curious plan for vengeance.

Kirk, from being a person who in his own words "hates work and takes life as a joke," has been helped by Mrs. Cortlandt to a position as conductor on the railroad. And the husband has invited him to be the guest of honor at a supper party. Then, before the assembled guests, Cortlandt denounces the pair, and, in return for favors received, makes a rapid harangue in which he presents the Ne'er-Do-Well with his wife; that is to say, with Mrs. Cortlandt.

This, the most dramatic moment in the book, is also the high spot in the play, and it is the culminating point in a scene of considerable suspense.

A last act, with Kirk on trial for the murder of Cortlandt, who has really committed suicide, brings a succession of amusing incidents, and a high-handed rescue of the lad by the elder Anthony, whose personal force and millions carry all the authority that such melodrama would seem to require. And there is throughout a very satisfying pictorial representation with several stage scenes of exceptional elaborateness. Of these a distant perspective of the canal operations, a handsome interior of a villa near Colon, and a broad view of a public square in Colon, are especially effective, peopled, as each is, with plenty of life, color, and variety in dress and movement of the characters.

It is altogether probable that in successive performances both of the leading players will give better accounts of themselves than they did at the dress rehearsal. Mr. Hale Hamilton has a certain glib smartness in delivering the vernacular, and he satisfies the eye as the athletic coach. But the fact remains that for a man of his prominence on the stage he has singularly little method. Certainly there are innumerable places here where good lines go for nothing. Which is merely an illustration of the fact that in this day of "types" on the stage the old Shakespearean advice to the players to "suit the action to the word and the word to the action" has been paraphrased into a habit of suiting the actor to the part and, if possible, the part to the actor.

The most vigorous and colorful acting in the play was provided by Orlando Daly as the husband, but Miss Katherine Kaelred, though she looked very handsome and was exquisitely gowned, hardly succeeded in making the most of such opportunities as there are. A particularly bright, piquant and amusing performance was provided by Miss Beatrice Noyes, and good studies in character were delivered by Dewitt Jennings, Robert Fischer, and Macey Harlam. Bright if brief bits here and there were added by several others in a cast which contains many speaking parts and a small host of supernumeraries.

"The Ne'er-Do-Well," to quote its hero, brings playgoers face to face with "the place where the hats come from." In that respect, at least, it is a novelty, and will probably please the multitude.

EDITOR DIES OF INJURIES.

Carlton J. Garretson of Judge Was Thrown from His Horse on May 11.

Carlton J. Garretson, one of the editors of Judge and Leslie's Weekly, who was injured May 11, by being thrown from the horse he was riding, in Seventh Avenue at 145th Street, died yesterday from his injuries in his home, 61 East Seventy-seventh Street. The accident was due to the fright of his horse. When an automobile crowded up close, the animal threw Mr. Garretson, causing a fracture of one of the vertebrae of his neck and injury to his spinal cord. It was thought he could not survive, but following an operation in the Presbyterian Hospital he lingered on. His mind remained clear and he dictated work to a stenographer two weeks ago.

Mr. Garretson, who was 33 years old, was formerly connected with the staff of The Globe. He was a graduate of Williams College, where he distinguished himself in athletics, making a record in the running high jump. His wife, Mrs. Belma Cook Garretson, their son, Carlton, Jr., and the sister of Mr. Garretson, Mrs. Jessica G. Finch, were with him when he died. His father is the Rev. F. Z. Garretson of East Williston, L. I.

CAPT. JOHN HOAGLAND DEAD.

Trailed Booth, Assassin of Lincoln, and Captured Several Accomplices.

Capt. John Hoagland, who commanded Company K., Thirteenth Regiment, New York State Volunteers, and was the first officer to go with a detachment in pursuit of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln, died Saturday in the home of his son, Elmo C. Hoagland, 467 Tenth Street, Brooklyn. He was born seventy-nine years ago in Flagtown, N. J. Capt. Hoagland, who received his various commissions from the War Governor of New York, Horatio Seymour, was mustered out of the service Dec. 1, 1864, with the rank of Brevet Major.

At the time of Lincoln's assassination the Thirteenth Regiment was encamped on Capitol Hill as part of the guard of Washington. On the night of the murder of Lincoln, Capt. Hoagland trailed Booth through St. Mary's County, Maryland, and so close did he follow him that Dr. Mudd was interrupted in setting Booth's broken leg. Capt. Hoagland captured one of the principal conspirators and several accomplices.

Capt. Hoagland was for many years in the importing produce business in this city, from which he retired ten years ago, when his wife, Louise Hoagland, died, and went to live on his farm at South Branch, N. J. He left two sons, Ira Gould and Elmo C., and a daughter, Louise Dalley of South Branch, N. J.

He was born on Staten Island in 1852, and had resided many years in Jamaica, L. I., where he practiced law, served as Police Justice and was editor and owner at one time of The Jamaica Standard, a weekly paper. In 1900 he was made a member of the Fish, Game, and Forest Commission by Gov. Roosevelt. Mr. Wood left two daughters, Catherine, a nurse in Flushing Hospital, and Christine, a student in Wellesley College, and five sons, Franklin of Chicago, Dr. Thomas Wood of Bellevue Hospital, Horace, Herbert, and Howard of Jamaica.

FUNMAKERS IN CONVENTION.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—Because they never labor, but only make jests of their work, the American Press Humorists' Association opened its annual convention here on Labor Day.

In conformity with their policy, they are making a joke of their convention. Some time during the week they are to stay here President Newtown Newkirk will call the gathering to order for the purpose of electing his successor. That function will be postponed as long as possible, because it will resemble work, and work and the "A. P. H. A." had a falling out long ago.

The rendezvous here to-day was the Wayne Hotel, which has a casino and Summer garden on stilts, overlooking the Detroit River just below its busiest spot. The alleged convention met at tables—about four to a table. The glassware was all extra heavy, to be safe from the cracking of jokes.

Presently the convention adjourned to motor cars, placed at the disposal of the jesters by the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association, and they were shown around to all the show places of the city. Edward Guest of The Detroit Free Press, who was the leader of the expedition, just to demonstrate that Detroit has nothing tame in its environs except Hughie Jennings's Tigers, steered the party over the ferry to Walkerville, where they viewed the Walkerville distillery. Not one of them drinks a drop; they went there simply to collate material for forthcoming jests. After the collation they attended a dinner given in their honor by the Walkers.

To-morrow the city will act as host at an official dinner on Belle Isle. The programme for the week consists of dinners, banquets, and "nothin' to do till to-morrow."

PERPLEXED HUSBAND PLAY OF RARE CHARM

In a Smartly Written Comedy, Alfred Sutro Happily Assails Foibles of Feminists.

A DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCE

Mr. Drew Makes His Annual Return Most Agreeably and In Admirable Company.

THE PERPLEXED HUSBAND, a comedy in four acts, by Alfred Sutro. Empire Theatre.

Thomas Pelling	John Drew
Clarence Woodhouse	Hubert Druce
Pitts	Walter Soderling
Sophie Pelling	Nina Sevening
Dulcie Elstead	Margaret Watson
Agatha Margel	Alice John
Kalleia	Mary Boland

If you came home from a trip to Russia, expecting to be met at the station by your young and loving wife, and if, instead, you were allowed to come to the house alone, and if, in place of smiles and hugs and the usual comfy greeting, you were received with a long face and a lot of platitudes about sex equality and spiritual development, and if, instead of a cozy evening all by your twos, you found that your best chairs were being occupied by a couple of high-sounding interlopers, while your wife had moved her belongings into a separate room—well, if you found all of these things wouldn't it—to quote the vernacular—"Wouldn't it jar you?"

That is what happened to Thomas Pelling in Alfred Sutro's exceptionally smart play, "The Perplexed Husband," which was acted at the Empire Theatre last evening, and which, be it said in passing, is one of the most ingratiating comedies that has been produced here for some time.

It is a comedy, to be sure, which may be caviare to the general, for it is somewhat slowly paced, and what the people say is often more important than what they do. But, nevertheless, it is something to be thankful for. Having subscribed which sentiment it may be as well to continue that Mr. Pelling was ultimately able to win back his wife from her strange false gods. And it was his very wise and matter-of-fact sister who first provided a hint of the way it might be done—a sensible suggestion which is ordinarily described as "fighting fire with fire," or using one poison as an antidote for another.

Mrs. Pelling had been to see Ibsen's "A Doll's House," and that started the trouble. It wasn't at all like the musical comedies that she and her husband had been in the habit of "taking in" after dinner at the Savoy. And with a confirmed feminist, one Mrs. Elstead, at her side, the little wife was soon in the way of regarding herself as another Nora, who had been "living with a strange man."

All of which didn't please Tom Pelling in the least.

"It must be a bad play," he said. "I don't believe it will have a long run."

The pleasantry, as may be imagined, did not help matters.

What ultimately brought about a reconciliation was the other woman. But lest Mr. Sutro be charged with following old trails, let it be said at once that the freshness of invention that is one of the play's greatest charms is also to be observed in his handling of this familiar motive.

A discharged stenographer, a young woman who worships "beauty," who dreams of Greek statuary, and is a lover of Swinburne and Browning, is brought into the house and Pelling confides in her.

And so she agrees to help him.

To her anything that is beautiful is good, and vice versa. She had been an artist's model, but forsook the profession because the paintings were so bad. And in opposition to the unhealthy doctrines of the feminists she offers the opinion that woman is to man like moonlight reflected on the waters. So hand in hand with the husband, with encouragement from an obese pedant who believes in the "movement," but is opposed to breaking up homes, she works for the wife's redemption. And the condition is attained after she and the pedant, financed by Tom Pelling, have started for Athens, there to realize beautiful dreams.

The general idea of the play is exquisite, its texture gossamer, its philosophy sound, and its general effect diverting. It is written in English which, though choice, is suggestive of the real speech of the people who use it. If one or two of the characters seem occasionally of an elevated cort, they are not too much so for the subject or the satire that they convey. The dialogue is scintillant with real wit, and the people themselves are highly diverting in several ways. Tom Pelling is a normal, average man; the adipose pedant who rejoices in the title of "the master" but grows tired of his disciples' extremes, is natural to type, and the woman's rights enthusiast is human and plausible. Nor does Mr. Sutro depreciate "the cause," however much he holds its exaggerations up to ridicule. And, since it is thus fair-minded, it is a wholesome and timely play, and deserves to succeed.

Moreover, it is acted very admirably, indeed, with Mr. Drew appearing in his most engaging light. He touches the humor of the rôle with familiar skill, and succeeds also in conveying a serious sense of the husband's discomfiture at discovery of the situation in his household, and his downright unhappiness at a momentary lapse from strict uxorial propriety. After all, he has his excuse. His wife has been endeavoring to create a condition where there shall be no "embarrassing conjugalities," and she has very nearly succeeded. Hubert Druce's performance of the pedant is richly humorous. It is, in fact, an exceptionally able and amusing characterization. The wife is acted most charmingly by the very exquisite Miss Sevening, whose beautiful playing in "Passers-By" is still remembered, and there is grace and loveliness and a good sense of the values in Miss Boland's portrait of the disciple of the beautiful. Miss Alice John plays the sister with much distinction and the brief rôle of the butler is neatly done by Mr. Soderling.

All in all, "The Perplexed Husband" is a rather rare experience. It is to be hoped that the class which is always crying for the finer things in plays will be sufficient in numbers and enthusiasm to give it prolonged success.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The Liebler Company has accepted for early production a new comedy called "Honest Jim Blunt," by William Boden. Tim Murphy is to have the principal role, and other important parts will be taken by Louise Closser Hale, Frederick Bond, and Violet Heming.

John Wesley has been engaged by the National Federation of Theatre Clubs to originate the role of Paul Hamden in "The Higher Court," the play to be produced by the Federation on Oct. 6.

A young man calling himself Maurice Klaw and asserting that he is a son of Marc Klaw of Klaw & Erlanger, has begun activities again. According to Mr. Klaw, the man has borrowed money and made purchases on the strength of the pretended relationship, and has also issued passes to the Klaw & Erlanger attractions. Mr. Klaw has been trying to catch this young man for the last three years and has heard of his work from coast to coast.

Underground Rails and Gold and Copper Shares Strong in London—Berlin Prices Weak.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 3.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"There was some demand for money yesterday, but the supply was very plentiful, and the rate for day-to-day advances gave way a little.

"Discount quotations were again weak except for four months' bills, which were firm. There was a good demand for short maturities, of which few were offered.

"It is expected that the Bank of England will secure the bulk of the South African gold this week.

"The week in the stock markets opened with a cheerful tone. Business was fairly active in some departments, and some stocks again showed strength, particularly Underground securities. The South African market was also active and buoyant.

"Canadian Pacific shares recovered.

"Shipping shares were less actively dealt in, and relapsed slightly.

"Rubber shares closed dull.

"In other sections business was rather inactive, but the tone was moderately firm."

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Prices closed strong and higher on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 92f 80c for the account.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Trading was dull on the Boerse to-day.

Realizing depressed prices in the afternoon, and the market closed weak.

RUBBER PRICES FLUCTUATE.

Trading Fairly Active, but Mostly to Fill Urgent Necessities.

The New York crude rubber market was marked last week more by the number of price changes that occurrred than by the amount of activity displayed on the part of buyers. Trading was fairly active in most grades throughout the week, but it was mostly of the hand-to-mouth order, and did not by any means justify the predictions made.

Trading opened in a generally quiet way, pending the outcome of the regular fortnightly auction at London, with prices firmly held at the closing levels of the previous week. The slightly easier tone developed on the opening day made domestic buyers cautious in the expectation of a reflection of the weakness in this market. The temporary suspension of activities soon made itself felt in the prices quoted on plantation and Para grades, despite the lack of any real selling pressure.

As intimated, buying in this market by manufacturing interests was generally limited so far as the size of the individual orders was concerned, and was largely confined to obtaining supplies necessary for immediate use. There was some trading among the dealers to fill out shipments required by previous contracts, but the amount of rubber that changed hands in this way was not great. Notwithstanding the dullness and the softening of the market for Para and plantation grades, Caucho, ball, Mexican scrap, Corinto, Esmeralda, and Guatemala rubber showed more or less substantial gains at the close.

The week in the foreign markets was featured by the offering of several hundred tons of Ceylon and plantation grades at auction in London. The offerings were cleaned up in three days, with the prices obtained slightly easier than those current at the last previous sale.

COAL CLAIMS CANCELED.

Alaska Land Office Charges Fraud in 300 Instances.

JUNEAU, Alaska, Sept. 2.—Three hundred of the 1,100 Alaska coal claims have been canceled by the General Land Office. In most cases the charges filed against the claim was that application for patent had not been made within the time required by law. Four claims in the Rathbone group in the Bering River field were canceled because it was charged the locations were not made in good faith but for the benefit of certain wealthy men in Portland, Oregon. No reply was made to the charges.

Forty-three claims in the Watson group have been canceled. Frank Watson, the promoter of this group, was indicted in Chicago in March, 1911, for conspiracy to defraud the United States in the use and possession of these lands, which are in the Matanuska district. Charges of fraud or failure to apply for patent are pending against practically all the Alaska coal claims not already canceled. Only thirty-two claims in the Matanuska are uncanceled.

TO INVESTIGATE COAL FIELDS.

United States Bureau of Mining Sends 35 Men to Alaska.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 2.—Thirty-five men from the United States Bureau of Mining sailed on the steamer Mariposa for Alaska to-day to investigate the value, extent and availability of the Bering River coal fields for the use of naval vessels.

The most important portions of the coal fields, known as the Stracey and Cunningham claims, are twenty-five miles from the mouth of Bering River. The men will encounter frightful weather during the whole of their work, with almost continuous rain and snow.

BANK MOVES ITS MONEY.

Interested Crowd Sees Cash and Securities Carried Through Streets.

With a special guard of employes and watchmen, millions of dollars in money and securities belonging to the Long Island City Savings Bank were hauled through the streets of Long Island City yesterday during the holiday lull in business. It was moving day for the bank, which had just given up its quarters at 21 Jackson Avenue, in the Hunters Point section of Long Island City, for more commodious quarters in the Queens Court Plaza Building, at the Queensboro Bridge Plaza. The bank will open for business in its new counting room this morning.

The moving was carried on under the direction of the Secretary, J. Harvey Smedley, and was watched with interest by hundreds of the residents of Long Island City.

WEEK'S PRICES STEADY.

Fewer Advances Have Direct Effect on the Cost of Living.

There were few fluctuations indicated in Dun's list of minimum wholesale prices quoted in the New York and near-by markets last week. Fifty commodities were quoted at levels different from those of the preceding week, thirty-seven of which showed advances and thirteen declines. Only nine of the advances had direct or indirect bearing on the increasing cost of living, the smallest number noted in several weeks. Four of the declines affected foodstuffs.

The metal market showed the greatest individual gain, nine advances having been indicated and no declines. Hides followed, with six advances and no recessions. Drugs, chemicals, and oils contributed ten advances and three declines. For the most part, the declines of the week were scattered, no individual market having shown evidences of great weakness. Six of the advancing commodities were quoted at figures below those of last year, and the same number of declines showed lower levels than in 1911.

The changes last week, with comparative prices for the previous week and last year, follow:

TO END COTTON TARE FRAUD.

Commissioner Conant Would Fix a Standard Amount to be Deducted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Results of an investigation made by the Commissioner of Corporations, Luther Conant, Jr., of the complaints that American cotton producers were the victims of excessive deductions for tare (bagging and ties) are made public in a report submitted to-day by the Commissioner to President Taft.

Cotton for export is sold net weight, and the American exporter, by the terms of his invoice contract with the foreign buyer, must compute the net weight by deducting 6 per cent. from the gross weight. The average bale, weighing 500 pounds gross, contains about 478 pounds of cotton and 22 pounds of tare as it comes from the producer. A deduction of 6 per cent., under the foreign tare rules, from a gross weight of 500 pounds, however, would leave only 470 pounds net, or 8 pounds less than the actual weight of the cotton.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that when the cotton reaches its destination, the foreign buyer, under the contract, has the right to demand an actual test for tare. In this test, the rules fix a maximum allowance for tare of only about 5.3 per cent, or 6½ pounds on a bale of 500 pounds. This is a discrepancy of 3½ pounds as compared with the 30-pound invoice deduction and the foreign buyer calls on the exporter to make good that amount.

The exporter, under these circumstances, faces a serious problem to avoid conducting business at a loss. The practical result of the rules has been that the exporter adds unnecessary tare to his cotton. The Commissioner estimates that at least 50 per cent. of exported cotton is over-tared, and it is in this uncertainty of amount that fraud is possible in the cotton business.

"There is always the invitation to cotton merchants to adopt improper practices," Mr. Conant adds, "and buyers of cotton, both in this country and abroad, are constantly finding themselves involved in transactions, where shippers have taken advantage of these opportunities to defraud."

The ideal remedy for all these evils, Mr. Conant concludes, is the standardization of tare to be put on a bale of cotton by making it a definite or readily ascertainable amount, so that the net weight may be determined without controversy or test. Pending adoption of such a remedy, the Commissioner believes substantial benefits will result by modifying the 6 per cent. contract so as to provide for a deduction of 5 per cent. or other percentage more accurately representing the amount of covering actually necessary to protect the cotton.

LESS POTTERY IMPORTED.

Statistics for 1911 Show Domestic Production's Growth.

Pottery imports into the United States in 1911 were valued at $10,638,616, according to an advance chapter of "Mineral Resources of the United States," published by the Geological Survey. The domestic production was valued at $34,518,560, making the total $45,157,176. After deducting exports, domestic $1,401,366 and foreign $24,566, the net consumption was valued at $43,731,244, of which the domestic production was 78.93 per cent. In 1910 the proportion was 77.08 per cent., in 1909 it was 76.19 per cent., and the next highest was in 1902, when it was 72.91 per cent. The year 1911 marked the greatest value for domestic pottery ever recorded, while at the same time imports, which are almost exclusively the higher grades of ware, decreased over 4 per cent. The continued advancement in quality of ware and the growing tendency to the use of American-made pottery will no doubt insure a steady growth of the industry.

Ohio continued to be the leading pottery-producing State of the Union, reporting for 1911 wares valued at $14,775,265, or 42.80 per cent. of the total. This was an increase of $480,553, or 3.36 per cent., over 1910, when Ohio reported pottery valued at $14,294,712, or 42.31 per cent. of the total. Ohio's principal pottery product is white ware, which constituted 63.06 per cent. of its entire product in 1911. New Jersey is the second largest pottery-producing State. For 1911 it reported wares valued at $8,401,941, or 24.34 per cent. of the total. This was a decrease of $186,514, or 2.17 per cent. New Jersey's principal pottery product is sanitary ware, which was 58.30 per cent. of its total for 1911. West Virginia was third in 1911, reporting ware valued at $2,880,202, or 8.34 per cent. of the total, an increase of $204,614, or 7.65 per cent. New York was fourth, displacing Pennsylvania, the former reporting 6.31 per cent. of the total and the latter 6.25 per cent., there being a difference of but $21,547 in the value of the pottery reported by these two States. Indiana and Illinois maintained their relative ranks of sixth and seventh, with 2.91 per cent. and 2.84 per cent. of the total, respectively. The first five States—Ohio, New Jersey, West Virginia, New York, and Pennsylvania reported 88.04 per cent. of the total production in 1911; in 1910 these States reported 88.60 per cent., and in 1909 87.60 per cent.

Buying Bonds for a Competence.

The judicious purchase of bonds is the best possible means not only of saving money but also of making money. This applies especially to the man of limited income who wishes to provide a competence for his later years.

By "judicious purchase" is meant not only the giving of due consideration to the usual factors in buying—security, yield, and marketability, but also to what may be called the fourth dimension of bond buying—possibility of appreciation in value.

Whenever possible we recommend bonds which fulfil the fourth requirement as well as the first three. At present there is an issue which we can so recommend. Ask us about it.

Consider The Fourth Dimension of Bond Buying.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

MUST ENTERTAIN BUYERS.

Jobbers and Wholesalers Find It Necessary In Order to Hold Trade.

"Next to the returned merchandise evil, petty grafting on the part of retail buyers is about the most annoying thing we have to contend with," said a well-known New York knit goods man recently, "and the most unfortunate part of the practice is that the salesmen have to stand for it out of their own salaries in most cases. It may be surprising to hear that a buyer with a salary ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 a year will often practically demand $10 or $15 worth of entertainment from some $1,200 salesman before giving him an order of any size, but it happens more frequently than is generally supposed.

"Women buyers, particularly the smaller buyer of hosiery and underwear, do not demand such tribute as a rule, but we are frequently told that a box of silk stockings is needed, and asked if we will sell it at retail to oblige them. This is merely a polite way of asking for the stockings, for to offer such buyers 10 to 25 per cent. off on the sale is productive of injured feelings and reduced business in the future.

"It is not only in this country that American buyers graft. While abroad this year I was talking with a prominent Swiss manufacturer, and was told of an instance where an American buyer had placed a big order with him, and almost immediately after had asked for a loan of the railroad fare to Paris on the plea that cabled funds were waiting him there. It was only a matter of some 40 francs or so, which the manufacturer willingly advanced. The loan was not paid, and the lender doubtless got a new view of retail buying principles in this country."

CANNED GOODS FEATURELESS

Poor Stocks in Liberal Supply, but In Little Demand.

Trading in the New York canned goods market last week was for the most part featureless. Following the naming of prices on new pack Alaska salmon in the previous week, there was considerable activity in the canned fish end of the trade, but the rest of the market was rather quiet.

New pack tomatoes for immediate delivery were firmer under the increased attention received from buyers, but futures were offered less freely. Packers successfully resisted efforts on the part of wholesalers to force prices down at the principal primary points, from all accounts, and the tone of the market was generally steady at the close. Spot peas were firm under the continued demand for them, and the scarcity of available supplies of the most wanted grades. Less desirable stocks were in fairly liberal supply, but for the most part received little call. Fancy grades of corn were also firm. Spot asparagus was generally dull, but beans were firm and spinach stronger under an improved demand.

The low prices named on new pack salmon caused no little flurry in this end of the market during the week. Some holders appeared anxious to dispose immediately of old pack stocks held on speculation, but in other quarters price levels were fairly well maintained in anticipation of short deliveries of new pack fish. Closing prices on the best Alaska grades ruled around $1.40 f. o. b. Coast per dozen for futures, and $1.65 for spot stocks of old pack. Domestic sardines were steady most of the week, with business in the imported lines rather dull.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Armlets Assessed at 85 Per Cent. as Articles of Personal Adornment.

Brass armlets, intended for use as ornaments for the arm and used on the stage, were the subject of a protest filed with the Board of United States General Appraisers By G. Hirsch's Sons. Duty had been assessed at 85 per cent. ad valorem by Collector Loeb under Paragraph 448, which provides for "all other articles of every description, finished or partly finished, composed in chief value of brass and used for personal adornment, whether known as jewelry or otherwise." The importers maintained that the goods were properly dutiable at 45 per cent. under Paragraph 199, or at 60 per cent. under the last part of Paragraph 488 for "all articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry." No evidence was introduced, and from an inspection of the samples the board affirmed the Collector's decision.

Stern Brothers were successful protestants over statuettes of ivory and cast bronze. The Appraiser had considered the bronze to be the component material of chief value and assessed duty as a "manufacture of metal" under Paragraph 199. They were contended to be dutiable under Paragraph 464 as a "manufacture of ivory." Judge Waite found that carved ivory was the most valuable feature, the flesh portions of the figures having been carved by hand, and authorized reliquidation accordingly.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The Empire Lumber Company, controlling 50,000 acres of timber land near Cowichan Lake, Vancouver Island, capitalized at $7,500,000, is getting ready for business. A mill site of 149 acres has been purchased at Osborne Bay, to which the E. & N. Railway is building a standard gauge branch that will soon be in active operation. According to Consul A. E. Smith, Victoria, B. C., New York capitalists are interested in the company.

The Chilean Government is making a strong effort to induce capitalists to build suitable homes for the working people, going so far as to guarantee 6 per cent. on the investment when constructed under the supervision of Government architects and rented according to regulations approved by the authorities.

During the past year there were over 4,000 new houses built in Sao Paulo, Brazil, all of which were occupied as soon as finished. The population of the city is now estimated at 380,000. At its present rate of growth, however, it is believed that this number will be increased to 1,000,000 within the next fifteen years.

WORLD'S CHEMISTS ARRIVING.

International Congress to Hold Its First Session Here on Friday.

Hundreds of skilled chemists from all parts of Europe and the United States, and even such distant countries as China, Japan, and South Africa, began to gather yesterday in the city in preparation for the eighth international congress of Applied Chemistry, which will hold its business sessions on Friday at Columbia University and at the City College. The first of the social functions which have been provided for the entertainment of the visitors and their wives was held last night at the Chemists' Club, 52 East Forty-first Street, when Prof. and Mrs. Morris E. Loeb gave a reception in their honor.

The function was private and informal, but was largely attended, and the first public event on the programme of the congress will take place to-morrow. The delegates will journey to Washington, and will there be formally welcomed to this country by President Taft, who has the title of patron of the gathering. After the inaugural meeting a garden party is to be held at the White House, and the foreign delegates will have an opportunity to see something of the Federal capital.

The real work of the congress will, however, be entirely performed in this city at the series of meetings which will begin on Friday and will continue to Thursday of next week. Many problems met with by the chemist in applying his science to manufactures will be discussed. At present there is a confusion of the terms used in the statement of analytical results. It is not easy for this reason for a chemist of Europe to understand what a colleague may have accomplished in South America, and he may be misled in his own work by a misunderstanding of technical terms. It is believed that this cause of error may be abolished, or, at any rate, minimized greatly by a discussion of the meaning of terms and the adoption of exact official definitions.

The President of the congress is William H. Nichols of New York.

BRING 7,350 PASSENGERS.

Five Steamships Make a Busy Day for Customs Inspectors.

Five Atlantic steamships arrived yesterday, bringing 7,350 passengers, about 50 per cent. of whom were in the first and second cabins. The Grosser Kurfurst, from Bremen, led the way up from Quarantine just before 7 o'clock in the morning, followed by the Cleveland, from Hamburg; the Lapland, from Antwerp, and the George Washington, from Bremen, landing their passengers at their respective piers within less than thirty minutes of each other.

It was a real Labor Day for the Customs Inspectors and Appraisers and the Acting Deputy Collectors and Surveyors. Their work ended with the arrival of the Minnewaska from London. To facilitate matters the United States revenue cutter Calumet was detailed to convey the Customs officials across the river to the piers. The people formed in lines 500 feet long waiting to get to the Customs desk to have their coupons signed, and many of the passengers were there four hours.

AWAIT POSTAL COMPLAINTS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The officials of the postal administration are keenly interested over the reports which will come from first and second class postmasters during the next five days on the new Sunday closing experiment. This innovation went into effect yesterday, but to-day being a holiday, no reports were received showing how it worked.

Several days will elapse before complaints are turned into the office of the Postmaster General. Mr. Hitchcock's orders, indicating in detail just how the Sunday closing requirements should be faced, were not issued until late Friday afternoon. Consequently the innovation was introduced on twenty-four hours' notice to the postmasters, at least so far as they were aware of the manner in which the Sunday closing law would be construed by the Postmaster General. Despite delay in issuing these orders, Mr. Hitchcock expressed the hope that the new arrangement would have a satisfactory start on Sunday. Should contingencies arise to warrant modification of the order for the Sunday delivery of mail to hotels, newspaper offices and newsdealers, Mr. Hitchcock, it is understood, will issue such supplementary orders as are necessary to adjust conditions.

The only office from which word has been received on the Sunday closing scheme is in Washington, which informally reported that only one man found it necessary to apply yesterday for his mail. This patron showed that it was necessary for him to receive an important letter, as he was leaving the city. The letter was delivered.

Superintendent Haycock of the city delivery service of the Washington Post Office made this statement concerning the enforcement of the closing order in Washington:

"The general public accommodated itself to the new order of things without fault-finding, and the corridors of the office were, in consequence, deserted yesterday, while all the clerks of the delivery section, one-third of those at the box department, and all the clerks in the inquiry and directory departments, were excused to spend Sunday at home with their families.

"From 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning delivery was made to newspaper offices and to the hotels that have formerly received mail by carrier Sunday. This made it possible to give four carriers a Sunday holiday. There were no deliveries at 4 P. M and 9 P. M. as formerly, and no complaints have been received because of the omission.

"While the new order makes provision for the delivery of mail addressed to the executive departments, there was even a falling off in demand for mail from that quarter.

"This morning's regular delivery at 7:30 o'clock, the holiday hour, saw every undelivered piece of mail matter on its way to its destination."

NEW BOOK ON TUBERCULOSIS

National Association Has Prepared a Treatise on Prevention.

"Fresh Air and How to Use It" is the title of a new hand-book issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. This volume, which according to Philip P. Jacobs, the assistant secretary of the society, will make its first appearance to-day, has been written for the association by Dr. Thomas Sees Carrington, and is designed to prevent tuberculosis by showing those people who have no trace of the disease how to ward off an attack of consumption by living and sleeping in the open air.

Owing to the exhaustive nature of the work and the expense which has attended its preparation and publication, the association will be unable to distribute it free of charge, but it is intended to urge its use as a text-book for school lectures on hygiene. However, it is intended to distribute free of charge a specially prepared sypnosis of the work entitled, "Directions for Living and Sleeping in the Open Air," which can be obtained on request at the headquarters of the association, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE SALE PURSUANT TO ADJOURNMENT.

CHANCERY SALE—In pursuance and by virtue of decrees of foreclosure and sale in favor of the NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY, complainant, made and entered by the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan, Southern Division, and of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, Western Division, and of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, which decrees were dated on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1911, and entered in said Eastern District of Michigan, Southern Division, May 4th, 1911, in said Northern District of Ohio, Western Division, May 6th, 1911, and in said Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, May 19th, 1911, in causes pending in said respective courts, and which were entitled: The New York Trust Company, complainant, vs. Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Company, et al., defendants; Knickerbocker Trust Company, complainant, vs. Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Company, defendant; William J. Courtney et al., complainants, vs. Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Company, defendant; (Consolidated Cause. In Equity); the causes pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, Western Division, and in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, being ancillary to the cause pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan, Southern Division; and in pursuance of orders directing adjournment of sale, entered therein on the 26th day of September, A. D. 1911, on the 23rd day of December, A. D. 1911, and on the 2nd day of April, A. D. 1912, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the undersigned, Special Master Commissioner of said courts, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, on TUESDAY, THE EIGHTH DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D. 1912, at 12 o'clock noon, standard time, of said day, at the former Delray Station building of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Company, on River Street, in the City of Detroit, County of Wayne and State of Michigan, being on the property described to be sold, as an entirety in one parcel, all the properties by the said decrees directed to be sold, to-wit: ALL the properties by the said decrees declared to be covered by the General Lien and Divisional First Mortgage from the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Company to The New York Trust Company, dated May 2, 1905, and by the said decrees directed to be sold.

The said Master Commissioner will accept no bid of less than $2,500,000, which minimum sum was fixed by the Court in the said decrees in order to prevent a sacrifice and to protect the interests of all concerned as the least sum for which the said property should be sold. He will not accept any bid unless the bidder shall forthwith place in his hands at the time of bidding, as a part of his bid and a pledge to make the same good if accepted and the sale confirmed, the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in cash, certified check or certificate of deposit approved by the Master, which sum shall be forfeited in case the bidder, if successful, shall fail to make good his bid and comply with the terms of the said decrees and of any orders thereafter made as to future payments or otherwise. But the same shall be applied on the purchase price in case of such compliance, or returned in case the bid is not successful or the sale shall not be confirmed by the Court. Nor will the Master accept a bid unless the purchaser shall, upon making his bid, pay to the Master for deposit in the registry of the said Court the sum of $111,780.80, or such other sum as shall be adjudged to be due to the Tiffin & Northwestern Railroad Company on the matters set forth in its intervening petition in the said suit; provided the said sum shall not have been paid by the receivers or other parties to the said suit prior to the said sale. If the bid of the purchaser is not accepted and the sale to him confirmed, said last-named deposit shall be returned to the purchaser; otherwise the said fund shall be held subject to such orders as the Court may make on the said intervening petition. The right of the Court is reserved to reject any bid and to retake and resell the property or any part thereof upon failure of the purchaser to comply with any order of the Court as to the payment of the remainder of the purchase price or any part thereof, or upon failure of the purchaser to comply with any condition of the sale or any order of the Court in that regard.

There shall be paid in cash of the price at which the said properties shall be sold in addition to the amounts paid at the time of the sale, such further portions of the purchase money as the Court shall direct. The remainder of the purchase price may be paid either in cash or in claims payable under Article 3 of the said decree, or in receivers' certificates payable under Article 3 thereof, or in the said General Lien and Divisional First Mortgage bonds with overdue coupons thereof, or in Consolidated bonds with overdue coupons thereof at such proportion of value as the holders thereof would be entitled to receive thereon on distribution of the proceeds of the sale in case the purchase price were wholly paid in cash.

All taxes and assessments upon the properties sold and all said receivers' certificates and all claims payable under said Article 3 of the said decrees will be allowed out of the purchase money where the purchaser produces proofs of such liens and claims and receipts for the payment thereof, or surrenders such certificates. The Special Master will, in his discretion, accept, temporarily, instead of the actual delivery of the said bonds and coupons or receivers' certificates, the certificate of any trust company, satisfactory to him, that it holds the said bonds and coupons or receivers' certificates subject to the order of the said Special Master, and will deliver them to him on demand for cancellation or other disposition.

The said Master, in pursuance and by virtue of the decrees of foreclosure in favor of Knickerbocker Trust Company, complainant, made and entered by the said Circuit Courts of the United States in this advertisement of sale first mentioned, dated and entered on the same days and in the same places as the said decrees in favor of the New York Trust Company, complainant, WILL ALSO AT THE SAME TIME AND PLACE OFFER FOR SALE and in separate parcels all other lines of railway and additional mileage of the defendant Railway Company and other property of any kind and nature which has been constructed or acquired in whole or in part by means of said Consolidated Bonds or with the proceeds of the sale or disposition thereof; subject only to purchase money liens thereon as in said Consolidated Mortgage set forth, not including in said property, however, any property which is subject to the prior lien thereon of the said General Lien and Divisional First Mortgage (all of which said property subject to said General Lien and Divisional First Mortgage is to be sold under and pursuant to the preceding provisions of this notice), one hundred shares of the stock of the Toledo Southern Railway Company and ten hundred and fourteen shares of preferred stock of the Ann Arbor Railroad Company, being certain property of the said Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railway Company included in the mortgage in favor of trust from that company to Knickerbocker Trust Company, complainant herein, dated May 2, 1905, to secure certain bonds designated as Consolidated bonds. The Master will accept no bid for the said shares of stock from any bidder who shall not place in his hands or deposit with him at the time of making the bid, as a pledge that the bidder will make good his bid if accepted by the Court, the sum of twenty-five dollars per share in cash, certified check or certificate of deposit, approved by the Master, which sum shall be forfeited in case the bidder, if successful, shall fail to make good his bid and comply with the terms of the said decrees, and any orders thereafter made as to future payments or otherwise, but which said sum shall be applied on the purchase price of the said stock in case of such compliance, or will be returned in case the said bid is not successful or the sale shall not be confirmed by the Court. The right of the Court is reserved to reject any bid and to resell the said stock, or any part thereof, upon the failure of the purchaser to comply with any order of the Court as to the payment of the purchase price or any part thereof, in cash or otherwise, as may be directed. If either the said properties, not, as aforesaid, subject to the General Lien and Divisional First Mortgage, or the said shares of stock shall be purchased by or on behalf of the holders of the said Consolidated Bonds, the remainder of the purchase price over and above the amount to be paid in cash may be paid at the time of sale, may be paid either in cash or in receivers' certificates, or in claims payable under Article 3 of the aforesaid decree of The New York Trust Company, or in said Consolidated Bonds and overdue coupons thereon, at such proportionate value as the holders thereof will be entitled to receive thereon respectively, on distribution of the proceeds of such sale, in case such purchase price were wholly paid in cash.

Any person proposing to purchase at the said sale either the said railway properties or the said stock, is referred to the said decrees in this notice specifically mentioned, and to the notice or advertisement of said sale heretofore published by the undersigned Special Master Commissioner upon the 15th, 22nd, and 29th of August, and the 5th, 12th and 19th of September, A. D. 1911, in the following newspapers, viz.: Detroit Free Press, Toledo Blade and New York Times, for a more full and complete description of the property, rights and franchises therein directed to be sold, which it is proposed to sell in accordance with the foregoing notice, and also for the terms and conditions upon which the sale of the said properties, rights and franchises shall be made. The said three decrees in favor of The New York Trust Company, Complainant, are exact duplicates of each other, and the said three decrees in favor of Knickerbocker Trust Company, Complainant, are exact duplicates of each other, and all of the said decrees may be found filed and recorded in the offices of the Clerks of the United States District Courts at Detroit, Michigan; Toledo, Ohio, and Columbus, Ohio, respectively, and which are subject to the inspection of the public generally. Certified copies of the said decrees will be in the possession of the said Special Master at the time and place of sale and may be inspected by interested persons or bidders.

BEACH TRIAL GOES OVER TILL FEBRUARY

Rumors That New Yorker Will Plead Guilty to Assault on Wife Denied by Counsel.

BEACHES NOW TOGETHER

Those Familiar with the Evidence Believe the Sensational Details Will Never Be Aired in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

AIKEN, S. C., Sept. 2.—Frederick O. Beach, indicted for assault and battery with intent to kill his wife, will not stand trial on the charge brought against him by the city authorities of Aiken at the September term of court, as had been expected.

Not until next February, which will be a year after Mrs. Beach was knocked down with a fence paling in the yard of her Winter home here, and her throat slashed with a pocket knife, will Mr. Beach be called upon to answer to the charge and explain away before an Aiken jury the mass of testimony worked up by Detective Baughn, connecting him with the crime which he has persistently laid to a mysterious and unknown negro.

Col. Daniel S. Henderson, chief of Beach's counsel and dean of the Aiken bar, has just returned from a sojourn of several months in Europe, and it had been understood that he would demand that the case come to an early trial, but Solicitor Robert L. Gunter said to-day that, although he told Col. Henderson that if he insisted upon it the Beach case would be placed on the court calender for trial in September, he did not find the attorney anxious to proceed with the matter.

Several of the witnesses, Col. Henderson said, were in Europe, and the Beaches themselves were spending the Summer in Maine.

Those who are familiar with the evidence obtained by Baughn, on which the Grand Jury last June returned a true bill to the indictment, still insist that when Beach is placed on trial he will enter a plea of guilty to the specific charge of assault and battery, which the Solicitor has stated he will accept and recommend that the court impose a cash fine. In this case the sensational evidence will not be introduced. Beach's attorneys, however, state positively that there will be no plea of guilty entered and that they will fight it in open court.
